Preface

When I commenced my research, which has led to this volume, I little realized the magnitude of the work which was before me. It was started with nothing more or less than the desire to preserve records of my own branch of the family, but as I went on and my interest increased, I wished to know of others who bore the family name, and, if possible, to connect them with myself. Investigation gradually took a wider range, and has been carried on unceasingly for these years. Fortunately, I did not realize the extent of a work of this kind, or I am afraid I should never have been its compiler. However, I have taken great interest in it and am now pleased to present it to the members of the family.

Having received a foundation, I determined to gather facts, concerning all branches of the family, from every living descendant whose name and address I could obtain. My method of compilation was exhaustive. During the time which elapsed between the fall of 1895 and the publication of this work, letters have been written by the score, and blanks and circulars sent out by the thousand. Every descendant, so far as possible, received a letter, blank or circular in a sealed envelope, thus making him fully acquainted with the work, and giving all a chance to contribute their part in making it a success. Self-addressed stamped envelopes were enclosed for an early reply. This enabled each member to have his or her records complete and accurate. When members of the family handed in their reports, the data was entered in the proper places and more information asked for, if needed. When a person failed to report at the expiration of a given time, a duplicate request was sent. If after two or three months, there was still no reply, the compiler again called upon them, stating that the work was soon to go to the printer for publication, and unless their reply was prompt their records would be incomplete in the forthcoming volume. By this means many replies were received. There were but very few families who did not care to have their records appear, but in all cases where my requests have been complied with, much care has been taken to have the record published correctly.

A part of the material has been taken from the genealogies of other families. Town, state and county histories have been consulted; probate records and registries of deeds have been carefully looked over, as well as the books in the keeping of town and city clerks. Some of the families have been called upon in person and in every case they have been found pleasant to meet, and by calling upon them data has been received that many letters could not have contained.

To compile this volume there has been exercised the utmost painstaking care, but I am fully conscious that it contains unavoidable omissions and imperfections, which are bound to creep into a work of this kind, as entire freedom from error is a success not to be expected. I have, therefore, endeavored to make it as accurate as possible for those who have occasion to refer to its pages, and I trust all will bear with me and overlook what may appear wrong to them.

I have to thank most sincerely all those who have assisted in the work, for their devoted efforts in gathering the material. It has been done by all with a will and with a desire to leave behind a perpetual tribute to their posterity. As I look back and think what a great amount of good all have done in bringing this work into print, I feel that I have but half repaid you all, but I have truly enjoyed my work, and I sincerely trust this book will meet with your approbation. The names of all those who have been so helpful are far too numerous to be mentioned here, but I thank you all and assure you that your names will ever be held in the fondest remembrance by me, and I trust you will all take this as an acknowledgment of your extreme kindness, which I can heartily say has been appreciated.

I have endeavored to arrange the work in such a way that any name may be easily found in less than a minute's time. The different generations have been designated at the top of the right hand pages, and by this means members of the family can easily tell to what generation they belong. An index will be found at the close of the volume which gives the Christian names of all those bearing the name of Hinds and surnames of all others, with number attached to each. The names of Hindses are numbered consecutively from the beginning to the end of the book, so that there will be no difficulty in finding the person looked for by referring to the index. The generation of each Hinds is given in the first lines of every name introduced, and is indicated at the right of the name by a small exponent.

An asterisk (*) placed at the left of the number indicates that further on in the book the same number will be found in larger figures, so as to strike the eye at a glance. Under these figures the history and children of the person named are given.

I would respectfully ask that each person, will upon receiving this book, look over his or her records, and immediately report all errors or omissions in dates, places, names, etc., that may be found. Any further data which may be added concerning any of the persons referred to, will be gratefully received. This information is wanted that when a second edition of the work is published all material may be correct and accurate.

I now place this volume in your hands, trusting that the friendship which has been begun by its compiling may last from now on to the end of life.

ALBERT HENRY HINDS.

The Surname

---

THE origin of the surname "Hind," "Hinde" and "Hinds" is doubtless to be referred to the word-root "hyne" or "hine" of the old English and Scotch languages. This root, which in one form or another is found in most of the ancient tongues included in both the Germanic and Celtic families of languages, occurs in the Anglo-Saxon in the term "hina-man," an expression meaning a tiller of the ground or farmer. With a "d" suffixed, the same root appears in early English in the word "hind," meaning in general, a peasant, farmer or dweller in the country, and in this form and with essentially the same meaning, it has continued in the language of England to the present day, as shown in the lines,

The hind, that homeward driving the slow steer
Tells how man's daily work goes forward there.

This surname then, sturdy English in origin as shown by its form, and closely related to similar names found among all the nations of northwestern Europe to-day, has a history that reaches far back through the dim vistas of the past, and may well be believed to be one of the earliest names to have been commonly used as a surname.

As surname originally designated occupation, estate, place of residence, or some personal trait or peculiarity, we infer that this name had its origin in the large body of English "freeholders," or small land-owners, usually designated collectively by the term "yeomanry," that "bold peasantry, their country's pride," their sinewy arms equally skilled to guide the plough or bend the tough bow in defense of Saxon liberty under the standard of the king. And is it to be esteemed a greater honor that one's ancestors should have come to old England with William the Norman, than to have been found stubbornly fighting around the standard of the "Golden Dragon of Wessex," when the stout-hearted Saxon yeomanry, with fierce cries of "Out! Out!" repelled their onslaughts against Harold, the "Last of the Saxons?"

Another explanation of the origin of this surname, transfers it from the class including those of Smith, Baker, and Carpenter to that containing Bird, Fish, Lamb, etc., in other words, refers its origin to the Anglo-Saxon word, "hind," the name applied to the female of the red deer. This noble animal, "goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind," was in early days very common in England and a much sought object of the chase. Another early spelling of the name is shown in these lines from an old English song :

As I came frae hynd-hunting
Sweet music reached my ears.

That this surname, as well as that of Hart and Roe, did in some instances at least, originate in this manner, seems to be indicated by an old English coat-of-arms belonging to the family of

"Hynde. A hind's head couped, ppr., collared, or, in the mouth a rose, gules, leaved vert."

Whether or not this early bearer of the surname of Hynde rejoiced as did one of old when he exclaimed, "Thou makest my feet like hind's feet and settest me up upon my high places!" he certainly showed taste in the selection of this emblem, for not only is this animal swift and sure-footed, but is often possessed of instincts so nearly human that it was no exaggeration when King Solomon spoke of "the loving hind and pleasant roe," or when the poet Campbell sang the praises of "Wiesbaden's gentle hind" that watched the sleeping child

As if it were her own.

This explains the fact that the term "hynd" early came to have the meaning, courteous or gentle attached to it, as in the case of the old English ballad of "Hynd Horn," from which two stanzas are quoted :

Near the King's court was a young child born,
With a hey lillelu and a how lo lan ;
And his name it was called Young Hynd Horn,
And the birk and the broom blooms bonnie.

Seven lang years he served the King,
With a hey lillelu and a how lo lan ;
And it's a' for the sake o' his daughter Jean,
And the birk and the broom blooms bonnie.

In connection with the statement made above, the coat-of-arms of the family of Hinde of Northumberland is both interesting and significant, giving expression as it does to the irresistible power of courtesy and kindness.

“On a rock a dove, azure, wings, or in the beak an olive branch.
Meseris succurrere disco.” (I study to relieve the distressed.)

But the following are more warlike :

“Hynd of London. A hand, gules, holding an eagle’s claw, ppr.”

“Hind. An ensign in full dress, with cocked hat, holding aloft the standard of Britain.”

Although it is customary at the present time to think of the surname of “Hind” and “Hinds” as being radically different from that of “Haines,” “Haynes” and even “Hine,” and although it appears probable that these different forms were originally derived from different sources, it is still doubtless true that all of these as well as several others, are frequently applied to descendants of a common ancestor. People were very careless about spelling two hundred years ago, and it is by no means unlikely that a similar license existed in matters of pronunciation. Indeed, it is evident that many of the common surnames of families in colonial times, were persistently mispronounced, till in some instances they were radically changed. Haskins and Hoskins, Stetson and Stutson, Kempton and Kimpton, Barnes and Burnes, and scores of others might be named as illustrations, for it is common to find both spellings very early, and referring to persons known to be of common descent.

So it would not be strange if the surname “Hinds” should have had similar liberties taken with it, and have been pronounced with its predominant vowel sound, either long “i” or long “a,” according to the habit or fancy of the speaker.

But we may feel positive that when the name was spelled “Hind” or “Hinds” in town or church records, that the writer, at least, was accustomed to pronounce it with the vowel sound of long “i” for all words of that form in the language, as bind, find, kind, etc., and there are many of them, were then as now, thus pronounced. The only present exception is the word “wind” used as a noun, and this was no exception in early times and still retains its ancient pronunciation in music and poetry.

But when the name “Hinds” appears in public records as “Hains” or “Haines,” as it frequently does, we cannot feel the same degree of certainty as to the pronunciation that the writer intended to express, and we suspect that the “ai” in the name as thus spelled was, sometimes at least, pronounced as in “aisle” although to-day the vowel sound given in the word “gain” would be intended.

This seems to be the simplest explanation of the fact that the surname of James Hinds of Salem, 1637, so frequently appears as “Hains,” “Haines,” and “Haynes,” in the early records of that town and parish, though Savage and other genealogists agree in giving the correct spelling as "Hinds" or "Hindes." Otherwise, we are forced to the more probable conclusion first suggested, that the name was differently pronounced by different individuals.

If any further explanation is needed to show how these forms may have started from a single name, it seems to be supplied by the numerous variations of the surname of James Hinds, of Salem, already referred to, as it appears in the town and church records of that place. Truly the names of his posterity are epitomized in his own, for no less than nine distinct spellings occur in records still in existence. They are as follows: Hinds, Hindes, Hynds, Hynes, Hines, Heines, Hains, Haines, Haynes. It is possible that this list is not complete.

Here is elasticity surely! And Long Island remains to be heard from, for he ultimately made that his home. It may be hoped that the good people of Southold, where his closing years were spent, finally learned how to pronounce and spell this troublesome name.

What was true of James Hinds, of Salem, was also true, though not in the same degree, of others bearing the surname of Hinds and Haynes in colonial times. John Haynes, illustrious governor of Massachusetts and afterward of Connecticut, was no exception, for his name was frequently misspelled in the public records of the time and even in the "Magnalia Christi" of Cotton Mather.

First Generation

1. James' Hinds (Heynes, Haynes, Hindes) the emigrant, came to this country, probably from England and landed in Salem, Mass., as early as 1637, when he was admitted as a freeman. He married in 1638, and at an early day removed to Southold, L. I., where he died in March, 1652-3, his estate being valued at £123 5s. 4d. His widow was married in June, 1656, to Ralph Dayton, of Southold. Benjamin Haines, who was at Southampton in 1639, and a resident of North Sea (Northampton) in 1657, was probably a brother to James. He was the grandfather of Stephen, who moved to Elizabeth, N. J., as early as 1725, and was probably the ancestor of Gov. Daniel Haines.

The following is communicated by A. M. Haines, Esq., of Galena, Ill., to the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register" in 1883.

James Haines removed from Salem, Mass., to Southold, L. I., about 1651-2, and was a cooper by profession. He is described in a deed made Aug. 7, 1660, as "James Haynes, late of Salem, in the county of Essex," etc., which is on record at Southold. His name is written on the Salem church records Haines, Haynes and Hindes. Hatfield in his history of Elizabeth, N. J., states that John Haynes appears at Elizabeth among the first sixty-five settlers, Feb. 19, 1665. This John Hinds or Haines, and his brother James, were sons of James Hinds of Salem, Mass., and Southold, L. I., and were bred coopers, etc. A John Hinds died at Elizabeth, N. J., in 1749, and John Dayton was one of his executors.

We have failed to trace the first James Hindes or Haines beyond Salem, but he undoubtedly came from Salem.

The following is the will of James Hinds, which was made March 1, 1652 :

"I, James Haynes being weake in bodie, but by divine Providence in p'fect memorie do make this my last will and testament :

"Impris. I doe give and bequeath that small estate the Lord hath been pleased to lend me to my loving wife Mary Haynes my children being Smale for to bring them upp withall only my tooles that belong to my calling I give them all to my oldest sonn John Haynes.

"2d. My will is that my children continue with my wife till they be twenty one years of age, th' older laboring to be a help to bring upp the younger, unless Providence order it otherwise that she shall dispose of herself in marriage and then shall see or have cause to put any of them to some honest trade or callinge.

"I leave it to her & my loving friends Mr. John Youngs, Sen : & John Herbert my overseers to dispose of, or in case she should not dispose of herself in marriage, that she finds not herselfe able to govern them, or that it bee not advantagious to the family to keep them all at home, then I leave it to her, and my aforesaid overseers to dispose of them. In testimony hereof I have sett my hand the 1 March 1652. Southold.

Second Generation

2. John<sup>2</sup> Hinds, son of James<sup>1</sup> Hinds, born Aug. 28, 1639 and died in Lancaster, Mass., in March, 1720. He married (first) a woman, of whom no record can be found. By her, he had one son and probably others. He married (second) in Lancaster, Feb. 9, 1681-2, Mary Butler, widow of James Butler, an early proprietor and planter of Lancaster. Her name is found mentioned in the Billerica records. He went from Woburn in 1676 to Lancaster, thence to Brookfield and from there back to Lancaster again.

Temples' "History of North Brookfield" says :

"John Hinds from Woburn, settles Lancaster, that part which became Bolton, May 25, 1710. He had a grant of 62 acres in Brookfield and in all 199 acres; sold house lot, April 13, 1719, to son John and returned to Lancaster, where he died, March 1720."

A few years after his death, his wife, executrix, "sells lands to her loving son, John of Brookfield." This piece of land was sold, Oct. 14, 1724.

The "Annals of Lancaster" says :

"John hinds hath this thirtie acre lott Granted by the town Lying one the east side of the Nashaway River in several places one piece Lying to the Southeast of Rattlesnake hill . . . more he hath a peice Laid out at the head of the Little Brook that Runs threw James Butler's Land near his houseplace" . . . .

The "History of Lancaster" says :

"John Hinds was one of those directed to garrison 'ye east side of ye river, under John Moore, commander, April 20, 1704.'"

The following is a true copy of the last will and testament of John Hinds, dated March 8, 1719-20, as recorded in East Cambridge, Mass.

"In the name of God Amen

William Hind of Salem

A vast amount of research has been made, regarding the earliest ancestor of this branch of the family in America, not only by the compiler of this volume, but by other and earlier members of the family. The records have been found very incomplete to enable one to establish the points as facts, but every effort has been made to get at the bottom and try if possible to make a connection with this early Hinds family who settled in or near Salem, Mass.

Considerable trouble and annoyance has been occasioned, not only in this branch of the family, but in nearly all of the other branches spoken of in this book, in the various ways of spelling the family name. The early wills, deeds and other old family documents have been carefully looked over and, in many instances, the name of a person has been found spelled in several different ways, in that one document alone. So all will bear with the compiler as he endeavors to show his reasons for assuming that the following facts, which he has collected, are those relating to John Hinds of Bridgewater.

The compiler has believed for a long time that John Hinds of Bridgewater was descended from some family who settled in Salem or in one of its adjacent towns. Records have been found showing that persons bearing the name of Hinds, (or Hinde and Hind, as the name was then spelled) landed on or near the shores of this historic city, but whether or not John Hinds, mentioned above, is descended from this stock, may perhaps remain an uncertainty for a time, as far as proving it for a fact is concerned.

The records which are here given go to show practically beyond a doubt, that John Hinds of Bridgewater, whose name has also been found spelled "Hains" on the public records, was descended from William Hind, aged thirty-five, who was made a freeman in 1635. It is firmly believed that this William Hind is the progenitor of this branch of the Hinds family in America, as everything stated below, points to that fact.

From J. C. Hotten's "List of Emigrants to America, 1600-1700," it will be observed that the list of names includes "Will<sup>m</sup> Hind, age 35" and "Margaret Hinde, age 30." We find that this authority further records that they were passengers in the Paule of London. It is not supposed that William and Margaret were man and wife, but that they were brother and sister, for the reason that a William Haines, of Salem, married Sarah Ingersoll, daughter of Richard Ingersoll, who emigrated from Bedfordshire, England, in 1639. Although this name is spelled H-a-i-n-e-s, there can be no doubt that it refers to William Hind, for nowhere in genealogical reference to the Haynes or Haines families in this country, has the compiler found any claim to a William at so early a period as this. He is in no way connected with the family of Gov. John Haynes, nor with John or Josiah Haynes of Ludbery, who it is stated in the "History of Shrewsbury," received a grant of thirty-two thousand acres of land. These Haynes brothers with their sisters, Sufferance and Mary, were children of Walter Haynes, a Wiltshire linen-weaver, who with his wife, Elizabeth, and children all under sixteen years of age, were passengers in the Confidence from England in 1638 and settled in Ludbery. Neither was he related to Deacon Samuel Haynes, born probably in 1611, who embarked in the ship Angel Gabriel from London, June 4, 1635, reached Pemaquid, where the ship was wrecked Aug. 15, 1635. From there, he went to Ipswich, then returned to England, but was in this country again in Dover, April 1, 1640, where he is mentioned again in 1642 and in 1648. From there, he moved to Greenland, N. H., and was deacon in the First church in Portsmouth in 1671. The first mention of a man having a similar name to the above William, was one William Haynes, who was transported to the Barbadoes in October, 1685, for participating in Monmouth's rebellion.

18. William Haines of Salem (doubtless William Hind of the Paule), joined the church in 1649, and it is recorded that Sarah (Ingersoll) Haynes joined the same year. One child at least was born to them, whom they named (19) William, and who married Abigail Ward, daughter of Samuel and his second wife, Sarah (Hubbard) Ward, of Marblehead, and granddaughter of Samuel Ward and wife Frances of Hingham. Some of these Wards are referred to in the records of the First church in Charlestown, Mass. This William, son of William and Sarah (Ingersoll) Haynes, it is believed, was the same as William Hains (or Hinds) who resided in Marblehead in 1728, he being then an old man, and who it is stated, enlisted from Salem, in Capt. Joseph Gardner's company during King Philip's war, and who was present at the taking of Narragansett Fort. He is mentioned in the list of names of those who received grants of land in 1728 in Narragansett Township No. 3, which later became Amherst, N. H. It is further believed that he was the same as William Hains of Salem, "yoeman deceased," who is mentioned in a deed, 1728-9, as conveying a piece of land in Salem village, which was afterwards sold to Samuel Ingersoll. This was, as will be seen, at about the same time in which he received a grant of land in Narragansett Township. Abigail Ward, his wife, is undoubtedly the same as Abigail Hinds, who with ten others joined the First church in Salem, May 19, 1684, and who a short time after, was one of the fifty or fifty-four (?) original members of the First church in Marblehead. This William appeared in Marblehead, an adjoining town to Salem, and had a son, John, who was probably the same John, as the John of Bridgewater, as he was apparently born at the same time.

It is probable that Margaret Hinde, who emigrated with her brother, married a man by the name of "Peach," undoubtedly the John Peach of Salem, who joined the church in 1630, as his son, whose will dated Oct. 2, 1682, and probated Sept. 30, 1684 ("Essex Probate Records" Book IV, page 95, also copied in the "Massachusetts Historical and Genealogical Register"), mentions "Cousin William Hine and his wife Abigail," also "Margaret Dalliwar, daughter of Peter Dalliwar," and "cousin Joseph Dalliwar," also son "John Hine, the only child at present of my cousin William Hine." Wyman's "Charlestown Genealogies and Estates," refers to a transfer of land in 1684, of estate of William Hinds and wife Abigail, with heirs, to E. Phillips, and records an abatement in taxes allowed the same year. This item is mentioned under the head of "Dolivar."

Now the reader may ask the relationship between William Hine and John Peach. If, as we suppose, William Hind and Margaret Hinde were brother and sister, and William had a son and Margaret had a child, these two children would have been cousins. Margaret married a Peach and had a son, John Peach. Therefore, John Peach, who made his will in 1682, would have been a cousin to William Hine, who had a son John Hine, William's "only child at present."

From the "Massachusetts Archives," "A list of ye names of Capt. Gardner's Souldiers for the p'sent expedition," mentions William Hind of Salem. This William Hind is not likely the emigrant of 1635, but it is probable that he was the emigrant William's son, the father of John Hine, "the only child at present of my cousin William Hine." The wording of this reference indicates that William was a young man, as the second William would have been during King Philip's war.

20. John Hinds of Bridgewater, who married Hannah Shaw, and who is believed to be the "only child at present of my cousin William Hine," had several daughters, the third being named "Abigail," and if the parents of John Hinds of Bridgewater, were

William and Abigail (Ward) Hinds, the reason for naming this daughter would be evident. This John of Bridgewater, named his first daughter "Hannah," presumably after his wife Hannah Shaw. His second, he named "Elizabeth," but after whom? There was an Elizabeth Hinds in Bridgewater at the time, or at least some years later, who married Nathaniel Conant, son of Nathaniel and Hannah Conant, who came to Bridgewater from Beverly. It would not be strange if she was related to John Hinds of Bridgewater. It is possible that she went from Salem or Marblehead to Bridgewater, as the Conants did.

The first wife of Rev. Ebenezer Hinds (son of John Hinds of Bridgewater), Susannah Keith, is buried on the same lot with some Conants in South Bridgewater, though fifty or seventy-five years before these Conants: but there might have been, and very likely were, other Conants or Hinds buried there previously, for it is a very ancient cemetery, and many "floating stones" were built into the stone wall, when the yard was rewalled. If all this means nothing, it is a very strange coincidence.

The naming of children may mean little in this case, but I notice the fact that John Hinds named his second daughter "Elizabeth," and that Elizabeth Hinds, of Bridgewater, named her second son "John Conant." Nathaniel Conant had been twice married before he married Elizabeth Hinds. It is therefore safe to say that John and Elizabeth Hinds appeared in Bridgewater, at or about the time their names appear on the public records.

This Elizabeth, who married Nathaniel Conant, can surely not be the daughter of John Hinds of Bridgewater, as John was not married until 1709, and Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Hinds) Conant married in 1716, and had children as follows: (a) Jeremiah, b. in 1720; (b) Margaret, b. in 1722; (c) John, b. in 1725; (d) Elizabeth, b. in 1727.

There was a Francis Hains, who had a wife Elizabeth. They may have come to Bridgewater, and Elizabeth perhaps married Nathaniel Conant, after the death of Francis, who died in 1717. A deed of John Conant, dated Nov. 5, 1718, refers to land bought of Francis Hains, deceased, and wife Elizabeth, now living. Mitchell in his "History of Bridgewater," says that Elizabeth Hains and Nathaniel Conant were married in 1716; but Francis Hains of Marblehead did not die until the year following, according to Savage. If either date should happen to be wrong by a year, it would strongly point in favor of Elizabeth Hains of Marblehead and Elizabeth Hinds of Bridgewater, as being one and the same.

We therefore infer from the foregoing explanation which has been carefully considered, and which has been gone over many times, that the first generation in this country was William and Sarah (Ingersoll) Haines; the second generation was William and Abigail (Ward) Haines; and the third generation, John and Hannah (Shaw) Hinds. The names have been spelled in so many different ways, probably the fault of the writing and the lack of knowledge of spelling in those early days, as will be especially noticed by referring to the old wills and documents, that it has been found very difficult to get at the above points. The compiler does not wish to lay them down as facts in the Hinds family, although everything strongly points in its favor, but wishes simply to lay them before the members of the family, in the hope that it will result in bringing the facts out at no distant date.

John<sup>3</sup> Hinds, son of William<sup>2</sup> and Abigail (Ward) Haines (William<sup>1</sup>), married Aug. 11, 1709, Hannah Shaw. It is supposed that she was the daughter of John and Hannah Shaw and that she was born April 26, 1687. John Shaw is believed to have been a grandson of Abraham Shaw of Dedham. The name of John Hinds has been found spelled on the public records, "Hains."

11. John<sup>3</sup> Hinds, son of John<sup>2</sup> and Mrs. Mary (Butler) Hinds (James<sup>1</sup>), born in Lancaster, Mass., Jan. 19, 1683 and died in Brookfield, Mass., Oct. 10, 1747; married Mrs. Hannah (Whittaker) Corlis, of Haverhill, Mass., who was born in September, 1691. At his death, she married for her third husband, June 18, 1749, Oliver Heyward, who died in Brookfield, Sept. 24, 1764, aged seventy-three years. An obituary of her was published in the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register," Vol. XII, in which she is claimed to have saved the lives of Mr. Rolfe's children, but whether or not this is so, it is evident that she is the Anna Whittaker, of Haverhill, who lived in the family. At her death, she left by her husband, John Hinds, thirteen children, eighty-two grandchildren and seventeen great grandchildren.

He was appointed on a committee of five, Jan. 23, 1728, to divide the town of Brookfield into four parts. He built a mill on Horse Pond Brook as early as 1738 and sold it to his son Seth, who sold it to Joseph Bartlett, who sold it March 3, 1761.

After the winter of 1704-5, a large part of the inhabitants had been kept in the employ of the Province as "standing guards," or "garrison soldiers;" and other young men who had been stationed as soldiers, had resolved to become inhabitants. To insure this result, and to hold out inducements to the sons of the first planters to remain, the committee, at a meeting held March 8, 1710, granted to Sergeant John White, forty-two acres of upland and twenty of meadow, "provided he live in the place four years, after he is wholly disbanded, and pay aches." Forty acres of the upland and twenty of meadow on the terms above mentioned were granted to John Hinds. He lived on this land up to the time of his death.

John, with his brothers was a member of Captain Thomas Buckminster's Brookfield company which, in August, 1748, went to Fort Dunner and garrisoned it.

His will ("Worcester Wills" Vol. II, page 694), dated May 10, 1749, mentions nine children, viz.: John, Seth and Corlis, Anna, Frances and Mary, all probably married, and Dinah, Tryphena, and Susannah, then unmarried.

He made his home in Lancaster until 1719, when he became a resident of Brookfield.

12. Jacob<sup>3</sup> Hinds, son of John<sup>2</sup> and Mrs. Mary (Butler) Hinds (Fames<sup>1</sup>), born probably in Brookfield, Mass., in 1685, and died in West Boylston, Mass.; married in Marlboro, Mass., Dec. 6, 1716, Grace Morse, daughter of Joseph and Hester (Peirce) Morse. She was born in Watertown, Mass., June 7, 1694. Her maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth Peirce. Her father at the age of twenty-four embarked at Ipswich, England, in April, 1634, in the ship Elizabeth, William Andrews, master. He settled in Watertown, where he was one of the proprietors and was admitted as a freeman, May 6, 1635. He was the oldest son of Joseph and Deborah Morse, who came to America probably a year or two later than their son.

Jacob Hinds was a farmer of Marlborough, where his name is found spelled on the public records "Hins." In 1717, he was one of the Marlborough people to settle Shrewsbury. From Shrewsbury, he moved with his family in 1720, to West Boylston and was probably the first white settler in that section. He lived on house lot No. 33 in 1729. He was on the muster roll of Captain Asa Whitcomb, in whose company he was a corporal.

The "History of Shrewsbury" says :

"The settlers who located Shrewsbury had divided among them, by the General Court, land for which grantee was to pay, within six years, £3 12s. 6d. Land was granted to forty-five persons. Jacob Hinds received Lot 33 of sixty acres. The grants were finally completed, Dec. 18, 1718. Some years afterwards, the proprietors required a count to be made to show how much meadow was allotted to each. This record shows in part this: 'Lot No. 33, Granted to Jacob Hinds Dec. 30, 1718. Thiss 33d House Lot in Shrewsbury contains in it 60 acres, and hath a 50 acre right belonging to it, &c., and lyeth near the S. E. angle of the Ministerial lot, and is bounded every way by undivided land. He hath for his division of meadow the sixth lot on Muddy Meadow. This Lot No. 33, is now Feb. 12, 1729, in possession of Jacob Hinds.'"

Jacob's will ("Worcester Wills" Vol. III, page 538), dated Sept. 24, 1764, and accompanying papers name the following children: Joseph, Benjamin, Jason and Jacob; Abigail, wife of Josiah Broad; Tabitha, wife of Bezabel Field; Mary, wife of Joshua Child; Sarah, wife of Micah Witherbee; and Elizabeth, wife of Ephraim Temple.

Children, first three born in Marlborough, others in Shrewsbury:

14. Hopestill<sup>3</sup> Hinds, son of John<sup>2</sup> and Mrs. Mary (Butler) Hinds (James<sup>1</sup>), born probably in Brookfield, Mass., Oct. 22, 1713; married Mary Walker. He had a grant of eighty acres of land in Brookfield, also one of one hundred thirty acres. He was appointed as one of a committee to help lay out the lands, granted by the town. He was also appointed a member of a committee to prevent the killing of deer as the law provided. From July 26, to Nov. 18, 1725, he was in service against the Indians. April 27, 1717, a rate was made for the paying of the minister of Brookfield, which contained the following:

Enoch Hinds	£0 2s. 6d.
Hopestill Hinds	1 4 6
John Hinds	1 2 0

As there were one hundred twenty-three names on the list, and the amount was £121 3s. 8d., it appears that these were average tax payers. The largest individual amount was £3 18s. 4d.

Baptized, March 27, 1743; married Feb. 20, 1722, Elizabeth Gilbert, daughter of Deacon Henry Gilbert. The record of this birth, as found, shows it as 1717, while that of his marriage is 1722. Doubtless he was born soon after his brother John. He had a grant of eighty acres and also of one hundred sixty acres.

Children :

Fourth Generation

25. Ebenezer<sup>4</sup> Hinds, son of John<sup>3</sup> and Hannah (Shaw) Hinds (William<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born in Bridgewater, Mass., July 29, 1719, and died in Fairhaven, Mass., April 19, 1812. He is buried in Old Middleborough, by the pond near Sampson's Hotel. He married (first) Susannah Keith of Bridgewater, who was born in 1727. She was the daughter of John and Hannah (Washburn) Keith, and granddaughter of Rev. James Keith, the first minister of Bridgewater. Susannah died April 5, 1750, and he married (second) in 1751, Lydia Bartlett, daughter of Richard Bartlett. His second wife died May 12, 1801. When about thirty years of age, Mr. Hinds received the ordinance of baptism by immersion at the hands of Rev. Ebenezer Moulton, pastor of the Baptist church in Brimfield, Mass., and this was probably administered the same year that he commenced exercising his gifts publicly in prayer and exhortation, for in speaking of Mr. Moulton, Backus says, "Elder Moulton was often called to other places to preach and baptize in and after 1749. Yes, he was called above eighty miles that year, and baptized ten in Bridgewater and three in Raynham."

Of the Second Baptist church in Boston, gathered in 1743, Ebenezer became a member, March 3, 1751, which was then under the care of Rev. Ephraim Bound. This Baptist church at first consisted of James Bound, John Proctor, Ephraim Bosworth, John Dabney, Thomas Boucher, Ephraim Bound and Thomas Lewis, who formed themselves into a church, July 27, 1743 and made choice of Ephraim Bound to be their pastor, who was ordained to the work of a gospel minister, Sept. 7, 1743. Their original number was speedily and largely increased by new members from the towns of Newton, Needham, Medfield and other adjacent places. "And the Lord added to the church daily, such as should be saved," until March 3, 1751, when among those thus gathered in was received, him who was then the eloquent exhorter, but who afterwards became the distinguished Calvinistic Baptist clergyman, the Rev. Ebenezer Hinds. Rev. Ephraim Bound, as pastor of that church, was in 1751, in the midst of the years of his greatest usefulness, which continued until the morning of Dec. 17, 1762, when he was visited by a paralytic shock, from the effect of which he only partially recovered so as to be able to preach a few sermons. Rev. Ephraim Bound died, greatly lamented, June 18, 1765, and during his ministrations, the church that in 1743 consisted of only seven members, had in 1765, increased to about one hundred and twenty members. Rev. Ephraim Bound was the son of James Bound, and he had received the ordinance of baptism at the hands of the Rev. Ebenezer Moulton of Brimfield.

In 1753, Rev. Ebenezer Hinds of Bridgewater, was invited to preach at the house of Thomas Nelson on Assawomsett Neck, where he continued to preach regularly. In discoursing of this Thomas Nelson, Backus' "History of the Baptists" says: "In 1753, he and his sons, with a few more set up a meeting at his house and obtained Mr. Ebenezer Hinds to preach to them. The church of which Rev. Ebenezer Hinds was ordained, Jan. 26, 1758, as first and original pastor was generally known as the Second Baptist church in Middleborough, it having been organized, Nov. 16, 1757. A house and farm was purchased for a parsonage at a part of Middleborough, now Lakeville, called 'Beech Woods,' and a church edifice purchased, that stood until fire destroyed it, May 19, 1798, together with the parsonage house."

Under date of Feb. 12, 1758, Rev. Isaac Backus wrote to his mother as follows:

"Loving Mother—A church was gathered in the south part of this town on the sixteenth of November and brother Hinds was ordained pastor, Jan. 26th, past.

"I was over there again at the ordination of their deacons last Thursday, and I can but hope that God has many blessings in store for that people."

Elder Hinds continued pastor of that church for upward of forty years. Here the best part of his life was spent; here most of his large family of fifteen children were born, and here eight of them died. The church enjoyed a marked revival during the years preceding the Revolutionary war. The Baptist faith spread very rapidly in those days in New England, and Elder Hinds did much toward helping on the movement. The Middleborough churches during that period were included in the "Warren Conference," so called from the fact that they met in Warren, R. I., for their yearly meetings. Copies of the "Minutes" of these conferences are now very rare. They show that Old Middleborough was a stronghold of the Baptist faith in those days and explain why it was the center of the educational movement in this denomination later, when Peirce Academy flourished, previous to the founding of Boston University.

Elder Hinds continued his labors with the Second Baptist church until having passed the period of threescore years and ten, when he closed his pastorate, though he still preached occasional sermons both there and elsewhere. Frequent mention is made of him on the pages of Backus, and Benedict states that after reaching the age of eighty, he would spring upon his horse, unaided, and ride off long distances to hold religious services or assist in any ordination or other special service.

Early in the year 1758, Capt. Benjamin Pratt raised a company of men in Middleborough for services on Lake George, during the French and Indian war. This company started from Middleborough, May 29, 1758, and from entries in the journal kept by Sergeant Seth Tinkham, a member of the company, it appears that Elder Hinds accompanied the force toward Saratoga in the capacity of chaplain. Two entries from the journal follow :

“ may the 30 we marched by sunrife to Lieut. man’s in Wrentham 11 miles, there went to Dinner, and then we marched to Dr. Corbitt’s in Billingham 10 miles, went to Supper. After supper mr. hinds preached a Sermon to us. there our Cart overtook us. there we stay<sup>d</sup>.”

“ June ye 1st we stayed at Hollands all Day Because of ye Rain and m<sup>r</sup>. Hinds Preached to us in Holland’s Barn.”

In the “ Peirce Family in the Old Colony,” Gen. Peirce mentions an interesting incident relating to Elder Hinds.

His grandfather Capt. Job Peirce served in the Provincial forces during 1759 before Halifax, N. S. When his time of enlistment expired, he, with others, was sent by government transport for Boston, but the vessel being disabled by a storm was carried far out of her course and finally made shore in the West Indies. Meanwhile news of the departure of the ill-fated transport is received in the Old Colony and the friends of the passengers gave them up for dead. But after the long winter months had passed, Job Peirce at last secured passage on board a vessel bound for New England and in due time landed in Bedford village.

“ Allowing no delay, he out-travels the news of his arrival, and soon stands upon his native hills again. Scenes familiar, orchards and beechen forests meet his eye ; but save the lowing of cattle and the singing of birds, a deathlike stillness prevails, for it is Sunday—a New England Sabbath kept after the manner of the Puritan fathers. No alarm was therefore occasioned in his mind to find his home untenanted, the whole family having repaired to the country church to attend public worship ; an example he lost no time in following. Arriving at the sanctuary during the ‘ long prayer ’ he, at its close, walked reverently up the aisle to the family pew, and then took his seat, creating no small stir among the worshipers, for the superstition of that day invested the sight with far less novelty than terror. It is uncertain how the grave assembly would have gained its equilibrium, but for the good sense and remarkable presence of mind exhibited by the preacher, who was about to open the sacred volume to improve upon the contemplated text, when this unexpected sight quite upset his former plans, and without finding it or even opening the book, he gave out for his text, the passage of Scripture, which saith : ' For this my son was dead and is alive again ; was lost and is found.' ”

The following is a copy of the deed of Elder Hinds to the Second Baptist church and society in Middleborough :

“ Know all men by these presents that I Eben<sup>r</sup> Hinds of Middleborough in the County of plymouth in the Common Welth of the mafachufetts Plant for an in Confideration of four hundred Dollars to me in hand paid by the Commety of the Second Baptift Church and Society in Middleborough and in the County Common Welth afor faid namely James peirce Hermon peirce & Jofhua Howland the Receipt I acknowledge and do by these presents Bargin Sell & Convay unto the faid Commety church and Society my Dwelling Houfe in Middleborough and now ftanding on the minifterial farme and now occupied by Elifha Briggs to hold the fame and I for myfelf & heirs do Covenant with the f<sup>d</sup> Commety Church & Society I Have full power and Lawfull athorety to fell the Houfe as above f<sup>d</sup> & therefore will Defend the fame againft the Lawfull clames of all perfons whatfoever I do allfo by presents releafe and forever quit Clame unto the minifterial farme whereon the Houfe ftands in witnefs hereof I have hereunto fet my hand feal this Second day of November one thoufand eight hundred & five.

Susannah Keith, first wife of Elder Hinds, was buried in the old cemetery in South Bridgewater village near the First Congregational church, the stone having the following inscription :—“ Here lies buried, Mrs. Susanna, wife of Mr. Ebenezer Hinds, and daughter of Mr. John Keith, who died April 5, 1750, in y<sup>e</sup> 23<sup>d</sup> year of her age, having been the mother of four children, and died in the faith of a glorious resurrection.” Her grave is in the northwestern section of the cemetery. It stands in a line with several others. On one side are the graves of Deacon Cornelius Holmes and wife, and on the other side, Phineas

Conant and wife. The nearness of these graves to hers and the fact that they were not made until from fifty to one hundred years later, suggest the possibility of John and Hannah Hinds being buried there beside her, the grave being afterward lost. When the last wall was built around this cemetery, many "floating stones" were built into it, and many graves in those days were marked by field stones of suitable shape, with or without inscriptions.

Lydia Bartlett, the second wife of Elder Hinds, was the daughter of Richard Bartlett, an Englishman, living in Boston. She had a brother Richard, who served as a soldier at Annapolis Royal in 1775 under Col. Winslow, in seizing and disposing the neutral French. He married Mary Robinson, of Bridgewater, a daughter of Gain Robinson, of East Bridgewater. Gain Robinson came to Plymouth from Ireland, and after living a while in Pembroke and Braintree, settled in East Bridgewater. He brought letters with him from churches in Ireland, Pembroke and Braintree. Richard Bartlett had a large family, born mostly in Nova Scotia, where he resided.

The following are epitaphs from the gravestones of Elder Hinds and wife, which are in the old cemetery on the "Neck" in Lakeville, Mass.:

The preaching of Whitefield and Tennant in Middleborough and neighboring towns during their tour of New England in the middle years of the preceding century, carried a remarkable revival of religion, which was soon followed by the rise of Independent or, as they were called by their enemies, "New Light" churches. The chief points of difference between the Independent churches and the established societies of the Congregational order, seem at first to have been in the ground taken by the former against the custom then in vogue of raising money for the support of the ministry by taxation. They also laid emphasis upon the need of a "change of heart" and "religious experience" as a condition of admission to church and held that any body of believers might establish a church in a precinct already formed, and contribute to its support instead of to that of the original church. They found cause for complaint also in the fact that academic training, rather than a spiritual life, was so frequently looked upon as the chief qualification needed by a preacher. These views excited bitter opposition and the refusal of those who held them to pay their "church rates" led to frequent imprisonments and the seizure and sale of personal property belonging to offenders.

Living as we do in a time of religious freedom, it is hard to understand the intolerant spirit of those days. The Independents were plainly in the right, as we view the matter to-day, although they were often legally wrong. And it is largely to the determined stand taken by these people that we owe the right to liberty of conscience, enjoyed to-day.

There were at least two of these Independent churches in the limits of old Middleborough in 1751, one being at Titicut village, under the pastoral care of Rev. Isaac Backus, and the other in the west precinct of the town, under the care of Rev. James Mead. Records, still in existence, show that these and sister churches in adjoining towns were accustomed to meet in "council" from time to time, to discuss and take action on matters of common concern. There were at least five of these "councils" held during the years 1751, '52 and '53, with the church in North Middleborough, and at one of these, the West Parish church was represented by James Mead and Deacon William Smith, who was afterwards deacon of the Second Baptist church.

But a fertile source of discord presented itself in the Independent churches at this time in the shape of infant baptism. This led soon to a general examination of the whole subject of baptism, with the result that many of the Independent societies embraced Baptist principles.

Even before this time, the subject had become prominent in Elder Backus' congregation, for at a church meeting held Aug. 7, 1749, two of the members, Ebenezer Hinds and Deacon Jonathan Woods, declared that they had embraced the views of the Baptists. This led to much discourse and soon resulted in the conversion of several of the members to the new views. Mr. Backus, at first very reluctant to accept the new doctrines, at length comes to that view and preaches a sermon in favor of immersion and against infant baptism. But he soon repents of the sermon as premature and retracts the statements made. But it unfortunately happened, that before doing so, he was obliged to be absent for several weeks in his native state of Connecticut, so that he found upon his return, that several members of his church who did not wish to longer postpone what they had come to view as a most solemn duty, had been, in the meantime, immersed by Rev. Mr. Moulton of Brimfield, Mass. Of the ten persons baptized at that time, nine were members of this church.

When these nine members found that their pastor had returned to his former views on the subject of baptism, they were naturally disappointed and perhaps offended, and with Independent consistency, they met by themselves for worship on the next Lord's Day. On the evening of Feb. 3, 1750, seven of them united together as a church and soon after Mr. Hinds began to preach among them. But it seemed best to dissolve the church in a few months, and Mr. Hinds and Mr. Woods united with the Second Baptist church in Boston. In 1753, Mr. Hinds commenced to preach regularly at the home of Thomas Nelson in Middleborough, thus being, so far as can be learned, the pioneer preacher of the Baptists in that township.

Some time was to elapse before Mr. Backus became settled in his religious views upon the subject of baptism. "No man who has not experienced the like," says he in his diary, "can form a proper idea of the distress I endured for two years." But it was not long before he took his place with Mr. Hinds, in the ranks of the new sect and from that time forward, the young denomination multiplied very rapidly in the old township of Middleborough. Before the close of the century, there were four flourishing churches of this denomination in town, the first at North Middleborough, organized in 1756; the second, in the West Precinct, organized in 1758; the third in South Middleborough, organized in 1761; and the fourth, or "Pond Church," near Assawomsett Neck, organized in 1800.

Old Middleborough is especially mentioned by Backus in his history, as being one of the chief strongholds of the Baptists in the latter half of the preceding century. Children born of Baptist parents, carried the faith into other states, especially Maine and New Hampshire, and there were many clergymen of this faith who were natives of the town. Among them may be named William, Samuel and Ebenezer Nelson, all sons of Thomas Nelson, and early graduates of Rhode Island College, and Rev. Noah Alden. A full list would perhaps exceed that of any other town in the state.

With the growth of the central part of the town, another church was needed early in the present century and was accordingly organized in 1828. The church edifice was the gift of Major Levi Peirce of Middleborough. This church came to be known as the Central Baptist church.

During the first half of the present century, Middleborough also became prominent as an educational center, on account of the location there of the Baptist Institution of learning—Pierce Academy. This institution long enjoyed a high reputation not only in Massachusetts, but all over New England, and was known in distant parts of the country and in Canada. Some whose names are now familiar throughout the nation were educated at this seminary.

The minutes of the "Old Colony Baptist Association of Churches" which was organized in 1823, give evidence of the strength of the denomination during this period. The minutes for 1839, for example, show reports from nineteen churches of southeastern Massachusetts, situated for the most part in Plymouth County. Of these, the three oldest and the three largest were in Middleborough, and in a total membership of 1,592, five hundred and forty-three or over one-third, being members of the five churches then situated in Middleborough.

The largest and by far the most influential of these was the Central Baptist church of Middleborough, then under the pastoral care of Rev. Ebenezer Nelson, and with a membership of 165; a branch at Halifax and a Sunday-school of 256 pupils and 32 teachers, more than double the size of any other Sunday-school reported, with but one exception. The next largest society was the Fourth Middleborough, with a membership of 151, and with a flourishing branch church and Sunday-school at Raynham. The Third Middleborough, was next in size. The reports from the Baptist Sunday-schools in Middleborough, that year, show 71 teachers and nearly 500 scholars enrolled.

The academy is referred to in the same report as in a flourishing condition and as having "strong claims upon the patronage and prayers of the churches."

It was some years later under the principalship of Professor Jenks, that the school enjoyed its period of greatest usefulness.

Rhode Island College and the Warren Association<sup>1</sup>

One of the most important facts in the early history of the Baptists in New England, was the formation of the Warren Association of Churches on Wednesday, Sept. 9, 1767, an event which has resulted in much good, not alone to the Baptist denomination, but to every citizen of Massachusetts, for it is in large measure owing to the influence of this and other similar organizations, that the people of this state and nation enjoy the right of liberty of conscience at the present day.

The journal of Chaplain Hezekiah Smith, refers to this event as follows :

"Mon. Sept. 7—Went to Warren. Tues. 8. Met with a number to form a regular association. Mr. Gano from New York preached a sermon upon the occasion at the opening of the meeting. Wed. 9. Mr. Manning's church at Warren, Mr. Hinds, at Middleborough, Mr. Alden's at Bellingham, and ours at Haverhill, formed an association. The same evening I preached from Prov. 3: 17."

James Manning, Hezekiah Smith, Noah Alden and Ebenezer Hinds, "four illustrious names, deserving for this act alone, to be held by the denomination in grateful and lasting remembrance!" says the author of the "Early History of Brown University," and in view of the influence for good exerted by the organization, we are sure the statement might be made more general.

It is to the Rev. James Manning that the credit belongs of having first conceived the idea of forming the Baptist churches of New England into an association. Mr. Manning was also the leader in the movement for a Baptist college for training young men to the work of the gospel ministry. He was destined to encounter considerable opposition, however, before his labors were crowned with success. Although Rhode Island, where it was decided to locate the college, was a stronghold of the Baptists in that day, considerable difficulty was encountered in getting a charter for the new institution of learning, from the General Assembly, and it was not until after three sessions had passed, that it was finally granted at an adjourned meeting held in East Greenwich, R. I., on the last Monday in February, 1764.

Rev. James Manning, as president of the Rhode Island College, as it was then called, and as pastor of the First church in Warren, began his labors in the fall of the same year. It was at about this time, that Manning seems to have conceived the idea of forming the Baptist churches of New England into an association, "in order to promote their harmony and growth, to resist more successfully the acts of oppression of the 'standing order' in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and especially to disarm his brethren of all existing prejudice against human learning, and thus advance the best interests of the college over which he presided." The aim was to form a union which should be "simply advisory in character, having respect to the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, by spreading through the churches, an account of the welfare and prosperity of each. The undertaking was one of no ordinary magnitude. The government of the Baptist churches had been from time immemorial, as now, of the independent form, each church having exclusive right of jurisdiction over its own members, electing and dismissing its own officers, and transacting all its business by final issue within itself, without appeal to any power on earth, either civil or ecclesiastical. It had always been the belief of the Baptists, that civil government, however desirable and necessary for civil purposes, had nothing to do with Christ's kingdom, which is spiritual, and not of this world, and nothing to do with the visible church, which is subject to Jesus Christ alone as the head thereof. Hence they regarded all conventions, synods, associations and councils, as antagonistic to the independence of the churches, as having more or less respect to the civil state, and so partaking too much of the carnal wisdom of this world. They had suffered so much from measures adopted by similar conventions of Congregational ministers, to be easily persuaded to do anything that might seem to be like following their example."

The first definite step toward the formation of an association was taken on Aug. 28, 1766, when the church at Warren passed the following resolution :

"That an association be entered into with sundry churches of the same faith and order, as it was judged a likely method to promote the peace of the Churches." As has been already noticed, the first meeting was held about a year later.

In the following year, 1768, eleven churches were represented at Warren, and Rev. Isaac Backus of Middleborough, was chosen clerk. But although the delegates in attendance "generally manifested a good will toward this attempt for promoting the union and welfare of the churches, most of them thought that they were not prepared to join an association." In the year following, however, a plan of association was presented to them that met with general favor and was adopted as a basis of organization. Let us glance at a few of their meetings.

The meeting of Sept. 7, 1767, directly following as it did, the first commencement exercise of Rhode Island College, was an interesting gathering. Several delegates from the Philadelphia Association were present. A significant measure passed by the meeting was "a proposal and plan for collection grievances," a measure intended to give assistance to Baptists, when their legal rights were denied them by the courts. From the action taken by the association in 1773, it is evident that they were determined that those rights should not be disregarded.

One of the most important meetings ever held by the Warren Association was that which convened at Medfield on Sept. 7, 1773, and continued in session for three days. There were eighteen churches represented at this meeting. Rev. Ebenezer Hinds was chosen moderator and William Williams, of Wrentham, clerk. Interest attaches to this meeting, because of the discussion of the question of "carrying in certificates." "The debates on the great question of the day," says Guild, "must have been full and spirited, although the meager printed minutes of four pages contain no allusion thereto." It was decided by a large majority, not to carry in any more certificates for the following reasons, as stated by Backus :

"1. Because it implies an acknowledgement that civil rulers have a right to set up one religious sect above another, which they have not.

"2. Because they are not representatives in religious matters, and therefore have no right to impose religious taxes.

"3. Because such a practise emboldens the actors therein to assume God's prerogative, and to judge the hearts of others.

"4. Because the Church is presented as a chaste virgin to Christ : and to place her trust and love upon any other for temporal support is playing the harlot, and so the way to destroy all religion.

"5. Because the practise abovesaid, tends to envy, hypocrisy and confusion, and so to the ruin of civil society."

This action led in the following year, to the association's deciding to send Rev. Isaac Backus to the Continental Congress, then in session in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, as the agent of the Baptist churches, to humbly petition that something might be done to secure religious liberty from the government at home, which saw so plainly its right to insist on civil liberty from the government abroad. At the same meeting, they appointed four days for solemn fasting and prayer for the ensuing year.

Although the mission of Mr. Backus to Philadelphia produced no immediate result, the principles of religious liberty triumphed in Massachusetts in 1780. Rev. Noah Alden, already mentioned as one of the founders of this association, was largely instrumental in securing the provision in the Constitution of Massachusetts, that guaranteed religious freedom. The language of the original draft of the third article in this document, was intended to give the State power in religious matters. Mr. Alden moved a reconsideration of the article and was a member of the committee that proposed it in its present form. Mr. Alden was also a prominent member of the Convention of 1788, that adopted the constitution of the United States.

Another important meeting of the old Warren Association was that held on Sept. 10, 1782. This is notable in that it was held with the Providence church, which had hitherto held aloof from the Association. It marked the beginning of closer relations between the churches of Rhode Island, which was originally what was called "Six Principle Baptists," and those of Massachusetts. These "Six Principle Baptists," were opposed to a paid ministry, to singing in public ministry, and held to the doctrine of laying on of hands. The meeting was held in the new and elegant house of worship just completed by the society, "for the worship of Almighty God and to hold commencements in," to use the quaint language of the record. This college was moved from Warren to Providence in 1771, and is now known as Brown University.

As an instance of the earnestness with which the "wrestling Jacobs" attended to the duties of the day, we note that at the close of the first day's session, they adjourned until five A. M., of the following morning in order that they might spend some time in prayer, "previous to attending on business, on account of the affected drought."

Among the more familiar names recorded as present at this meeting, is that of Elder Hinds. In fact, the minutes of these yearly meetings usually show him present, even though his attendance necessitated a long journey of forty or fifty miles on horseback.

He was constable in 1768, and on committee for supply from 1780 to 1789. From March to December, 1756, he was a member of Captain Solomon Key's company. He is also reported as being on the muster roll of Captain Nathaniel Woolcott's company, which marched August 9, and was out sixteen days.

According to the "History of Chesterfield, N. H.," Corlis Hinds emigrated from England and settled in Massachusetts. Tradition has it that he had six children, viz.: five sons and one daughter whose name was Amy. Of the sons, only three names are given, viz.: Cornelius, Forbes and Jesse; Jesse being the youngest. A vast amount of search has been made to show that this Corlis really did come from England, but what has been handed down from mouth to mouth, is the only proof which we have of it, except the "History of Chesterfield," and the author probably got his information from these traditional reports. We know that his father was born in this country and that his mother's name by her first marriage became Corlis. That would naturally enough show the reason for naming this son, Corlis. Members of the family also claim that this Corlis lived to be about 106 years of age.

He surely did reach a great age, but the compiler believes that this is also tradition. One member of the family claims he died in 1700, twenty-four years before the date recorded as his birth. The same party also claims that this Corlis, who died in 1700, married and had children the same as the Corlis, whom we find recorded as being born in 1724. One can readily see by referring to successive generations that 1700 could not have been the date of death of Corlis.

Another point which has been very confusing regarding this man, has been the variety of names which have been ascribed to his wife. One member of the family gives his first wife's name as Jennie McCullar, and the first name of his second wife was Jennie; another says his first wife was named McMaster and his second McCulloch or possibly McCuller; a third says his first wife was named McMaster and his second McCutter; while the history from which these records were taken, gives the first wife's name as McAllister. Thus it has been found very perplexing and trying at times to get at what is supposed to be the correct names. These names which are given as correct, are such as seem most probable and which the greater number of the members of the family have agreed to.

Children, by first wife, the first nine born in Brookfield, the tenth in Barre, Mass.:

Child, by second marriage:

She was born in Middleborough, Feb. 25, 1780, and died June 1, 1842. He was by trade a carpenter, and was noted for his uncommon ingenuity in mechanism. He was master builder of the Congregational meeting-house in Assonet village, in Freetown, Mass., which was erected about 1809. He served as ensign in the seventh company of local militia of Middleborough, from Aug. 15, 1796. But no carpenter's tool which he used in his trade was keener than his tongue, nor cutting of wood done smoother, nor better or closer fit made or could be made in mechanism, than his power of expression enabled him to execute in a caustic reply or sarcastic description. Nor would he "balk a joke for relation's sake" as the following will show. He is said to have had a horse of so vicious a temper that whenever in decent flesh, always became unmanageable; and hence to keep it poor, became a necessity to enable the rider to retain the proper ascendancy over the beast. Some member of the Hinds family attempted to ridicule the sorry plight of the horse and asked Peirce why his horse was so poor. "Because 'tis like the Hinds family, they can't endure prosperity," was the quick, tart answer. Children: (a) Elbridge Gerry<sup>7</sup>, b. Dec. 19, 1801; m. He served as private in the second company of minute men under Capt. Isaac Wood, which company responded to the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775. He was also a sergeant in Capt. Job Peirce's company and served in Rhode Island, in December, 1776. The town of Middleborough sent four companies of militia to the Second Rhode Island alarm in August, 1780, Ebenezer being a sergeant in the fourth company. His wife was a direct descendant of Dr. Samuel Fuller of the Mayflower, who died in Plymouth in 1633.

for his own land, was exerting an influence that embittered against him all who denied that claim.

"They purchased a note of Mr. Hinds, commenced a suit upon it, took him fourteen miles from home for trial before D. Ross, Esq., at a late hour in the day, making it necessary for him to remain over night. In the evening, the house in which he lodged was surrounded by a mob, who forcibly entered and took him from the house: and tying him to a horse's tail, dragged him through Wyalusing Creek, near its forks. When nearly exhausted, Mr. Hinds made the Masonic sign, which induced one of the fraternity to give him assistance, but when he had reached the shore, his assailants formed a ring, and seizing his hands, drew him around his burning effigy, and occasionally pushed him into the flames. For this deed, eighteen persons were indicted for riot and assault, and taken to Wilkesbarre, as the parties belonged in what was then Luzerne County. On the trial, the defendents withdrew the plea of 'not guilty.' Five were imprisoned for the space of three months without bail, one of whom had to pay $10, and four of them, $20, each; and also to pay the cost of prosecution and stand committed until the whole was paid. Nine were to pay a fine of $30 each, and the courts further ordered 'that they enter into recognizances each in the sum of $500, with one good freeholder in like sum, conditional for their good behavior for the space of one year; and that they severally pay the costs of prosecution and stand committed until the whole sentence be compiled with.'"

Bartlett was one of the three county commissioners elected when the county was organized out of Luzerne in 1812, he being elected for one year.

wife, Hannah Tuttle, to whom he was married Oct. 10, 1784, often found him weeping for his lost, but still beloved Susannah. He resided in Claremont, N. H., for a number of years and removed to Barnet, Vt., about 1803. Mr. Strobridge was a member of the Vermont General Assembly in October, 1806. At that date, he was also a member of the Land Tax Committee. He served in the army during the whole of the Revolutionary war, and wore crape on his arm for thirty days after the death of General Washington.

The following amusing anecdote of William Strobridge is related by his grandson, William H. Strobridge of Brooklyn, N. Y. "In the young days of his large family, while living in Claremont, N. H., he spent an evening at a hotel with some friends. Returning late, he slept soundly. During the morning, his wife went repeatedly to his bedside, saying, 'William, don't you want some breakfast?' but William only stretched himself and relapsed into slumber again. Making a final visit to the bedroom, his wife commenced putting things to rights. Lifting his trousers from a chair, out of a pocket fell a piece of paper containing the following :

" William Strobridge, To ———, Dr.,
                   " for six suppers,                   $3.00
                   " Received payment,
                   " (signed) ———

"She disturbed him no more, but after a while heard him call, 'Hannah, isn't it late?' She answered, 'Yes, William, but I wouldn't hurry; if you had six suppers last night, they ought to last you through the day.'"

It may be of interest to some of the descendants of William Strobridge, to know that his old Queen Anne clock and desk are carefully preserved and treasured by his granddaughter, Mrs. Marilla Wheeler of Portville, N. Y.

William Strobridge was the son of James Strobridge and wife, Mary Gordon of Voluntown. He was born in Middleborough, West Parish, Oct. 19, 1759, and baptized Nov. 2, 1756, by the Rev. John Morehead, pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian church of Boston. He died in Barnet, Vt., March or February (both months are given) 9, 1843. His farm in Barnet is still owned by descendants.

The Strobridges of Middleborough were descendants of William Strobridge and wife, Margaret Henry. William Strobridge, according to family tradition, was born about 1690 in some place near Londonderry, in the north of Ireland, and married his wife in 1716. He came to this country with his wife and daughter, Mary, who was born in Ireland, between 1718 and 1722, probably about 1719. He settled in the West Parish of Middleborough where he was a blacksmith, and died Nov. 14, 1777. He was one of the original members of the West Parish church, which was organized in 1725. The records of the First church in Middleborough, state that William and Margaret Strobridge from Donagh, Ireland, united with the church in 1722 and were dismissed soon after.

William Strobridge, husband of Susannah Hinds, was a grandson of the emigrants, William and Margaret Strobridge.

She was a niece of Capt. Levi Rounseville of Freetown, and was a descendant of Philip Rounseville, who came to this country about 1700. He was a drummer in the patriot army in the Revolutionary war, in the company commanded by Capt. Levi Rounseville of Freetown. June 12, 1789, he was commissioned lieutenant in the local militia of Middleborough, which company was commanded by Capt. Henry Peirce.

Lieut. Leonard Hinds is traditionally reported to have once been in company with Abiel Washburn of Middleborough, in carrying on the business of a country store in that town. Abiel Washburn afterward became a brigadier-general in the local militia and was familiarly known as Gen. Washburn. Their store building was in what is now known as Lakeville, and occupied the precise spot where the new road branches off from the old one.

A former resident of Freetown, who died there when about ninety-two years old, and who spent his youth in that part of Middleborough now Lakeville, used in the evening of his days, to delight in telling stories of "ye olden tyme," illustrative of the great change that had been wrought in our country since he could remember, and one of his stories was that a woman in Middleborough, spun and wove seventy yards of tow-cloth and carried it to Hinds & Washburn's store and gave it all for seven yards of calico. The old man continued, "Six yards was a dress pattern in those days, but there were seven yards in that piece of calico and the merchant refused to cut it, and thus the parties compromised at the rate of seventy to seven."

His remains were interred in the ancient cemetery opposite the Christian chapel in Assonet village, Freetown, Mass., and his grave is marked by a dark colored stone bearing the following inscription :

IN MEMORY OF

The title of "Captain" was acquired from the circumstance that he had been master of a vessel. An old account book gives evidence of the fact that in March, 1798, Preserved Hinds was master of a sloop bearing the name of "Fair Rosamond" which, March 14, 1798, was discharged at a wharf in Assonet of a load of corn. Tradition adds that he came home from sea, sick of a fever and soon after died. It will be observed that the town record and inscription do not agree, as one made him in his thirty-third year and the other in his thirty-fourth year at his death.

I'm friendless, alone, and nigh broken-hearted,
 This world full of pleasures, contains none for me ;
 I oft heave a sigh, for the dear ones departed,
 And oft in fond memory their lineaments see.

When the last closing scene in life's journey is ended,
 And my spirit has flown to the bright realms of love,
 May my ashes with theirs be peacefully blended,
 While our souls are too happy in Heaven above.

From your sister

DAU<sup>T</sup> OF MR. EBENEZER & MRS. CHARITY HINDS,
WHO DIED SEPT. 21, 1800, IN THE 17TH YEAR OF HER AGE.

The following poem was written upon the death of Salome Hinds :

With solemn awe death strikes beholders round,
When by it they do see the youth cut down;
So was I shock'd when lately I survey'd
The relics of a young and sprightly maid.

Sudden her death, in prime of life cut down;
Oh, what an awful scene to think upon!
Nor did she fall alone when she did die,
Her parents' hopes were blasted, too, thereby.

Surely, 'twas something they did not foresee,
 Their daughter, should so soon confined, be
 Within the grave, thence never more to rise
 Until the last loud trump shall pierce the skies.

And now to see the solemn kindred mourn,
 We will our thoughts and pen a while return ;
 And, oh, it was enough to pierce one's heart
 To see how loth they were from her to part.

Her parents, brothers, sisters, too, did mourn,
 And with their briny tears did wet her win ;
 Their throbbing hearts with anguish great did swell,
 To think they must of her take their farewell.

Now on the gloomy hearse, who is convey'd,
 And by a train of mourners follow'd.
 The youths who lately with her used to meet,
 Now do her follow to her last retreat.

And may they all remember that one day,
 Like her, they must die and molder into clay ;
 Their youthful bloom and lively looks will fade,
 And all they boast of in the grave be laid.

And while I write, my heart sinks at the thought,
 That I one day to the grave must be brought.
 No doubt the time unalterably is fix'd,
 That I must pass from this world to the next.

And may my soul then rise to worlds above,
 To dwell with Him who did His people love,
 Who dy'd to save them from the wrath to come,
 And will them raise to His eternal home.

Mass., Jan. 22, 1801, and is deceased; married (first) in October, 1827, Nancy Parker of Sandwich, who was born Aug. 23, 1807, and died Aug. 9, 1846; married (second) Aug. 11, 1849, Abbie F. Perry, who died without children in 1862; married (third) Elizabeth Baldwin. He remained on his father's farm until he reached the age of eighteen, during which time, he attended the village school and obtained what was considered, in those days, a good education. In 1819, he went away from home to seek his fortune, the first place he visited being Clark's Point, near New Bedford, Mass. Here he obtained employment with a farmer, who was also the lighthouse-keeper. Heman became quite interested in boats while there, and built the first sailboat which was ever put into the water at Sampson's Pond. He disliked the work on a farm, and soon got the chance of going South to work in the swamps of Florida. This was shortly after the war of 1812, when the government had commenced to build their navy, and Heman's employers were Bixby & Thurston, who were to furnish live oak timbers to put into the warships. He was engaged at twenty-seven dollars a month, and in company with his brother and sixty other men, he embarked on the sloop "Spartan," from New Bedford for Savannah. The second night out from port, their vessel was struck by lightning and several of the passengers badly burned. Free from further mishap, they reached the St. Johns River, and at once went into the forests with the rest of the party. The company which he was at work for, soon after failed and he was left without provisions and a very small amount of money. By trading with Indians and working at odd jobs, which he could get hold of in the South, he at last got together money enough to return home. He did not remain at home long, however, but went South again, and engaged in building marine railways, wharves and bulkheads, and gave employment to a great many hands. Here he cut a great amount of wood, which he was to ship North, when the Civil war broke out, and he was compelled to go North once more. After the war, he visited his lands, and found that his wood was either burned or carted away, and his property was a total loss. On Jan. 22, 1895, he celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday at his home and received his many friends, who came to meet him and his wife.

His title of lieutenant, was derived from the fact of his having served as paymaster of the 2d regiment, 2d brigade of the 5th division of the local militia of Massachusetts, to which position he was appointed, March 17, 1811, and on the staff of Col. Benjamin Lincoln of New Bedford. His old military chapeau, now in the possession of Gen. E. W. Peirce, is described by him as being "in the height of the Bonaparte style and about twice the size ever worn since, and must have been a serious incumbrance to the wearer at any time, but particularly if the wind were blowing briskly." Lieutenant John Hinds, died Dec. 1, 1811, and was buried in the Peirce family cemetery in Lakeville, where a stone with the following stanza marks his resting-place :

How lov'd, how valu'd once avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot ;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art and all the proud shall be.

171. Ruth P.<sup>6</sup> Hinds, daughter of Leonard<sup>5</sup> and Mary (Rounseville) Hinds (Ebenezer<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>3</sup>, William<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born in Middleborough, Mass., Aug. 31, 1791, and died Nov. 14, 1891, aged 100 years, 2 months, 14 days ; married Nov. 20, 1814, Walter Davis, son of Nathan and Rose (Allen) Davis. He was born in Fairhaven, Mass., July 12, 1785, and was a farmer of Acushnet, Mass. Among the sacred things of life such as childhood, youth, love and religion, we must place old age. By the young it is morbidly dreaded, though it is respected. To them, old age is the saddest thing in existence. The waning of years means the decay of everything mental and physical, perhaps a hopeless dependency. But old age may be idealized. To grow old is often to grow great. To achieve a richness of experience, to pass the bounds of illusions and live among the verities of life ; to be happy, and to brighten the world, and above all things to be useful. These thoughts inspire a deeper respect for age and make its approach less dreaded.

August 31, 1891, was a memorable day for Mrs. Ruth (Hinds) Davis, of Long Plain, Mass. She was then one hundred years old. What a distinction, what a rare favor, and how very few can attain it ! Her hale old age was the gift of ancestors, who were proud of their hardihood and integrity. Mrs. Davis was the great-great-granddaughter of Philip Rounseville, who was born in England and who came to this country during the last of the sixteenth or the first of the seventeenth century. This Philip had a son William, who had a son Joseph, whose daughter was Mary, the mother of the subject of this sketch. Mrs. Davis was educated in the Baptist religion and was at her death, a member of that society. This woman who lived such a long and useful life, was blessed with an active mind and good health. Her hearing was somewhat impaired, but her mind was everything that could have been desired. Her memory was clear, and covering as it did nearly a century, she was an unusually interesting conversationalist. She watched the growth of New Bedford, from the time it was a mere hamlet. The events of the war of 1812 were personal reminiscences with her. At her hundredth anniversary, she had not laid aside all domestic cares. She was very useful about her home, and was loved by all who were honored by her acquaintance. She took a lively interest in the proceedings incidental to the celebration and received many and valuable presents. There were present representatives of five living generations. A large crowd was in attendance and many callers visited her during the week preceding. About eighty people sat down to dinner, at which they made merry and enjoyed a good time.

*It has been very hard finding out anything concerning this man, many letters having been written, and the older members of the family having been consulted. He is supposed to have had four children, viz.: three daughters and one son. The son's name was Mirick<sup>7</sup>. A Mr. Chamberlain married one of Samuel's daughters, and information thus far obtained, points to the fact that it was Elizabeth<sup>7</sup>. However, it is a fact that he married one of Samuel's daughters. Samuel had another daughter, named Caroline M.<sup>7</sup> Hinds, who doubtless was his youngest. The third daughter was married but no record of her name or the one whom she married has been found. Caroline doesn't appear to have been married up to the latest letters written by her, for in a letter dated in 1837, she signs her name "Caroline M. Hinds." This information was taken from letters written by Samuel and his daughter Caroline. In a letter dated in 1831, he writes that his father was then in fair health, but feared he would lose his sight and hearing before long. He also stated that his father was obliged to use crutches, because of lameness which had troubled him for twelve or fourteen years.—The COMPILER.

of John and Rebecca (Moore) Richardson. He was born in Templeton, Mass., Oct. 26, 1776, and died Dec. 24, 1855. A little previous to the year 1800, he came to the wilds of Central Vermont. In that new country, he spent nearly a year in felling the forest and in making a rude home for himself and future wife. At his first house-raising, he was assisted by all his fellow townsmen, who numbered only seven. He then returned to his native Templeton, was married and brought his bride to the home he had prepared for her in that remote region. In the town where he first made his home, Warren, Washington Co., Vt., he continued to reside during the remainder of his life, where he became a prominent citizen. He kept a public house for several years and was widely known in the surrounding country. He was one of the original members of the Congregational church, and for years led the choir, which was often composed of his own family, and it was no feeble singing they had in those days. He was decided in his opinions, and willing to express them on all fit occasions, by which he sometimes made enemies, but he did not swerve on that account. He filled many important public offices with ability and credit.

He enlisted while in his minority in the regular army, and served for a short period in the war of 1812, for which service he received a pension since Feb. 14, 1871. He was a member of Capt. Robert Douglass' Co. B, 34th Regt. U. S. Infantry, and was discharged from service, April 27, 1814, being then nineteen years of age.

In 1835, while a resident of Bloomington, Me., he served the town as one of its selectmen. He also served the town of Dover in the same capacity. In 1832, he was commissioned by Gov. Samuel E. Smith, as captain in the state militia, which position he resigned March 8, 1837, being then captain, Co. B., 1st Regt. Infantry. In 1847, he was county treasurer, and again in 1870, '71, and '72.

He was one of the first men in his county to espouse the cause of the slave, and helped to form the first abolition party in that county; was an ardent Republican from the first formation of that party to the end of life, and as such represented his district (Dover, etc.), in the Legislature in 1856-57. He early joined the temperance reform, and was a true friend and a hard worker for the advancement of its principles. He was a firm believer in the Christian religion, although he never made a public profession; and was willing when death drew near to trust in Jesus as his Redeemer.

Few people are called upon to pass through greater afflictions in their lifetime than he. All his brothers, and all his sisters except one, of a large family, had died before him. His five children all died before reaching the age of manhood and womanhood. His wife died at the age of sixty-one years; his father at seventy-seven and his mother at the age of ninety-one. All these had gone before him, and he was left alone. A home was offered him by his only remaining sister, but he preferred to remain where so many years of his life had been spent as it seemed most like home to him.

In the cemetery in Dover village, stand nine stone monuments in line, which seem like stern sentinels, to be keeping guard, and waiting for this last member of that large company, gathered in the silent camping-ground of the dead.

In the spring of 1833, he, with his brother, visited some of the more sparsely settled parts of the state of Maine, to select new homes, upon cheaper and better lands. "Honorable, upright, and thoroughly respectable," an intimate acquaintance says of him. In the exercise of his profession, he was a peacemaker, using his influence to reconcile enemies and promote amicable settlements. At home, he was a patient gentleman. His life was spent in the quiet, uneventful obscurity of a small New England village.

In comparison with more eminent classmates, he made no name, but in those sterling, essential elements of character, which alone pass current in all worlds, he was the peer of any one of them.

"Aunt Amy," as all the members of the family know her, though a very old lady, lives alone, does her own work and is possessed of all her faculties. Every year as her birthday comes around, she receives her friends from early morning until late at night, always having a pleasant smile and a kind word for all. Among her warmest friends are many young people, who delight in calling upon her and in listening to her stories of long ago. Her memory is remarkable, her wit is as keen as it was in the days of her youth, while she is always hard at work, trying to make life easier and happier for some who have need of sympathy and help. The happy manners, the cheery smiles and pleasant words of Mrs. Additon, have done much to alleviate the suffering of the poor and sick, and it may truthfully be said that her pathway through life, has been brightly illuminated by the sunshine of her kindly heart. One of the secrets of her long and useful life, she says, is by using the medicine of cheerfulness, "and it is a very good medicine too." At the completion of her ninety-third year, she had made two sofa pillows, seven patchwork quilts, which she gave to the poor; thirteen rugs, twenty-seven garments and forty-nine pieces of embroidery. Besides all this, she has ridden over a thousand miles on the railroad, and passed a great deal of time visiting the sick. While she is gradually coming to the close of life, we all hope that she will live to celebrate her hundredth anniversary, which will occur in five years. She lives in Portland, Me. (1899), where she has made her home for many years. She is a member of the Universalist church, and is a regular attendant, taking part in nearly all of their social gatherings and good times.

She is unmarried. She was invested at birth with push, vim and understanding. Bereft of her father under the most saddening circumstances, he having been drowned by the overturning of a boat amid a jam of logs in Richmond, Me., she was, at sixteen years of age, thrown upon her own resources, which must be the outgrowth of a strong and fine nature, to combat with the world, full of enterprise, growth and progress. She learned the trade of a tailoress and worked at her trade as a means of self-support, and to assist as well as might be, her widowed mother and the large family so suddenly become fatherless. She would go from place to place and sew, according to the needs of the various families who employed her, in the seasons requiring an efficient seamstress. She did her work well. As she grew older, she developed an unusual skill in caring for the sick; would go and watch with those persons, who when too ill to care for themselves, and having no means with which to hire a nurse, must have suffered without such ministrations. Afterwards, as times changed and she was remunerated with wages, according to the prices paid at the time of services rendered, nurses were scarce, and the presence of Sarah Hinds came to be so imperative that she had scarcely time to rest from the tedium of the sick room, until it began to tell on her nervous system. And yet she labored on, until after fully fifty years caring for people of all grades in illness, she retired to the home of her brother, Noble P. Hinds, caring for his wife in her last illness, and remaining at his house as housekeeper for him and his two children. Noble and Sarah are living alone in Livermore (Hillman's Ferry), except when Annie, with her family, comes from Brockton, annually, to pass several weeks with them. In her youth, Sarah united with the Methodist church in Livermore. At middle life, she secured the agency for the sale of shoulder-braces, from different manufacturers and thus amassed sufficient for a life support.

377. Charity Canedy Hinds, daughter of Principal C.<sup>6</sup> and Drusilla (Allen) Hinds (Ebenezer<sup>5</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>3</sup>, William<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born in Livermore, Me., Nov. 19, 1814, and died in 1893; married (first) in Nobleville, Ind., Sept. 3, 1837, John Hutchens, of Henderson, Ky. Just before his death, he had a law suit pending in Indianapolis, and to get there was obliged to cross the White River on horseback. When night came, the stream was so swollen that it was dangerous to return home. Being a man of great love for home, and for punctuality, he would hazard all. When he retired, his wife found that his hair was damp, and he remarked that he had swam home and had struck something, hurting his head. He soon became violently ill, which terminated in his death, Oct. 2, 1841. His death came near unbalancing his wife's mind, who was left alone just on the threshold of prosperity. His wife, afterwards, for her support, taught an advanced class of young pupils. She married (second) Feb. 25, 1844, Colonel Charles Weaver Hutchens, who was born in Owego Village, N. Y., about 1801, and died in Henderson, March 1, 1893. She was a most brilliant and highly cultured woman of rare Christian graces. Her second husband was an able politician and journalist, and as an editor, had few equals. He was appointed colonel in the Indiana militia, and was provost marshal during the war of the rebellion. He was a fluent speaker, and made a strong race for Congress. In later days, he was county judge of Henderson Co., and it was his honor to draw up and have passed the charter of the city of Henderson, Ky., about 1853.

Asa Tyler Winslow, in Lakeville, Dec. 21, 1864, Rachel Pickens Winslow, daughter of Rev. Asa Tyler and Ann (Pickens) Winslow. She was born in Middleborough, Oct. 5, 1841. He commenced to work at the trade of sawyer, which he had learned with his father at an early age, working in several different towns in southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and this continued to be his occupation the greater part of his life. The house in which he was born stands on the farm, which was the home of John and Olive (Valentine) Hinds, during the latter part of their lives. Their son, Sumner, built the house now standing, and always occupied it until his death. Sumner's son, Stephen, has also lived there and brought up his family under the same roof. The old house which was occupied by John and Olive Hinds, was torn down many years ago. It was occupied after his death by his son Leonard, and daughter Nancy, neither of whom married. It stood a few rods south of the new house, and was shaded by a large buttonwood tree, still standing. The subject of this sketch united with the Central Methodist Episcopal church, Middleborough, soon after its organization, and was an original pew-owner in the same. Later, he became a member of the Central Congregational church, uniting with the latter, March 26, 1873. He resides in Middleborough (1899).

Winslow, was a member of the general court of Massachusetts in 1845 and 1846, and served several years as selectman, assessor and overseer of the poor for Middleborough and later for Lakeville. He was appointed justice of the peace, March 19, 1851. Ann Pickens, her mother, was a daughter of Zattu and Rachel (Mead) Pickens, of Middleborough. She was a descendant of the emigrant, Thomas and Margaret (Steele) Pickens, early settlers in the west parish of Middleborough. After her husband's death, she resided with her daughter, in Middleborough, where she died March 17, 1895, at the advanced age of 94 years, 9 months and 14 days.

breeding shorthorn cattle, and still maintains his herd, taking a lively interest in this breed. For years he has kept a large flock of grade sheep on his farm, and at one time had a flock of registered merinos. These he has changed for registered Shropshires, of which he has a large flock, and is an official of the American association. He also breeds Poland-China hogs, grade Percheron horses, and standard bred trotters. He is also a large feeder of cattle, sheep and hogs, following western methods in the feeding and care of the stock. His extensive corn crop is fed out to cattle, in the open field, and his fattening hogs follow them. He aims to do everything with as little expense for labor as possible.

At the Columbian World's Fair, Mr. Hinds was chief marshal, and also one of the dairy commission. He had charge of the shorthorns in the dairy test, and how well he performed his various duties is a matter of record. From the day the fair opened, until its close, he was never absent from the grounds during business hours, and the manner in which he selected and managed the shorthorns in the dairy test, proved him emphatically the right man in the right place. The results he obtained, no doubt, had much to do with the revival of interest in that great breed in the dairy states.

Mr. Hinds has been honored politically, as well as by the various associations to which he has belonged. He has been elected to office in every association to which he belongs—has been president of the State Shorthorn and Shropshire Sheep Associations, vice-president of the Michigan Merino Association, has been president of the State Live Stock Sanitary Commission since its organization, an official of the State Agricultural Society, and a member of the executive committee of the State Grange. While well along in years, Mr. Hinds has preserved in a wonderful degree the feelings and sympathies of a young man. He is very active mentally and bodily, a quick and clear thinker, and a strong advocate of his views on any subject in which he is interested. He has a large number of warm friends and admirers among the live-stock breeders of Michigan, and they always insist upon availing themselves of his abilities. He is a Republican in politics.

Mr. Hinds has been of much assistance in tracing out the records of his branch of the family for this work, and has sent on from time to time, much valuable information.

Eden, Vt., June 29, 1841; married (second) in 1843, Mrs. Lydia (Phelps) Ritterbush, who died in 1864. It has been said by members of the family, that this second wife was an exemplary woman and an ideal step-mother.

When he was about ten years of age, his parents sold their place in Massachusetts and started for Vermont in the spring of 1801. They were six weeks in making the journey, and were the first persons to enter the town of Eden with a team of any kind. There were but three or four families residing in the town at the time. Two days were spent with one of them, thus giving them time to construct a rude house for themselves. They afterward moved to the farm where he lived until 1869, having lived on the same farm for fifty years. At the death of his second wife, he was given a home with his daughter, Mrs. Fitch, with whom he lived the remainder of his life.

In 1812, he enlisted in the United States army for six months, served his time, reenlisted for five years, and served until peace was declared. He served under General Winfield Scott, and was wounded in the battle of Lundy's Lane. At his death, sixty-eight out of eighty-three grandchildren were living, also four great grandchildren. Six of his sons were engaged in the war of the Rebellion, and did honor to the patriotism of their venerable father. He held at different times all the town offices of Eden, except town clerk. He represented the town for five years, 1828-1833. He was justice of the peace for twenty years, and assistant county judge for two years.

He was extremely modest and self-distrusting, never seeking the chief seat, but instinctively shrank from being the object of special attention. He sought only to be useful in the sphere in which he moved. As regarded him, office was the seeker and he the sought. But when called to positions of trust and prominence, he was self-reliant and firm in his convictions and administrations; and while he did not excel in any one specialty, yet by his sound judgment and unyielding integrity, he stood high in the estimation of those who knew him, and especially of those who knew him best. His conscientiousness was remarkable, and those who knew him understood this full well. With a remarkable strength, he combined one of the most tender hearts, so that no man could feel, if he had to decide against him, there could have entered into the elements which made up his judgment, anything of a personal animosity. As to his religious character, though he belonged to no church, he was a firm believer in and a supporter of the Christian religion. His broad and liberal views of Christianity did not consist in laxity of principle and life, but in love and friendship for all. His life was evidence of this. The tenderness with which he cherished his friends, may be illustrated thus: In speaking of Ida Fitch, his granddaughter, he remarked: "As for me it is no matter. I have lived out my time, but she is young—", here his eyes filling with tears, he could say no more. But God's ways are not our ways, for just two weeks before he passed the Heavenly portals, the Saviour came and bore away the amiable and promising young lady to the beautiful mansions of immortality, where no disease can blight or death destroy; where sorrow's tears will never fall, and partings never come.

in May, 1780, also journeyed to Vermont and married Phebe, another daughter of David Bent, in the year 1800, where he established a mercantile business, in which he continued until 1809. During the latter year he also moved to the Black River Country. The route was then by the way of the Mohawk and Black River valleys, in the state of New York, and the way was often beset by dangers, of stream and forest; the little party had a narrow escape from drowning, so says tradition, in crossing the West Canada Creek near Trenton, Oneida County; the teamster, missing the fording place, the wagon was swept down the stream, then swollen by late November storms, and was barely rescued, with its load of household goods, wife and children; the youngest (Carlos), was then only six weeks old. They stopped in Denmark, Lewis County, N. Y., where they resided for two years, near the home of Peter Bent, Sr., who was a brother of Phebe, and who had previously emigrated from Mt. Holly. It was here that Earl Bent Hinds was born, on the 25th day of October, 1811, being the first of his family to be born in the state of New York. Later on Thomas moved into the town of Champion, Jefferson County, where he settled on a farm between Tylerville and Copenhagen; he served in the war of 1812, and with his brother, Joseph Buckminster Hinds, was at the battle of Sacketts Harbor, May 29, 1813. They had thirteen children, and in common with the early settlers of the country at that time, endured many privations incident to pioneer life. One frosty autumn morning, while the family were living in the town of Champion, a neighbor came hurriedly to the house, with the news that a bear and cub were regaling themselves with nuts in a beech tree not far away. Thomas owned a gun, an old army musket, with flint lock, and though he had a supply of powder and shot, he had no bullets prepared, such as were required to deal with game of this size. In this emergency, an old pewter plate was cut in strips and rolled into slugs, that answered the purpose and secured the bear; another neighbor arrived soon after with a rifle and shot the cub. Such incidents, vividly retained in minds then young, serve to illustrate the time and the country.

When seven years of age, Earl B. Hinds went to live with his aunt, Polly Hinds, in Watertown, then the widow of Corlis above mentioned, who died in 1813; his duties here were to drive the cows, and to assist in winding quills for weaving the household linen. When about twelve years old he engaged with a farmer, on Dry Hill (Mr. Ira Fiske), and lived there two years, attending the district schools in winter and working on the farm summers; this was continued a number of years later with other farmers, among whom were his uncle Silas Bent Hinds and his elder brother, Thomas Hinds. He also worked in a distillery on Dry Hill owned by Col. Joseph Sheldon, and in Tuttle & Sills distillery in Watertown, and also in a distillery in Rodman, Jefferson County.

In 1835, Earl B. and his next older brother Carlos, purchased a farm in Hounsfield, Jefferson County, and Carlos having married, both lived on it and worked it for one year, then having an opportunity to sell it for a thousand dollars more than they had paid, they sold, and each thereafter bought a farm for himself. Earl B. bought on Dry Hill, in the township of Watertown, and carried on his farm for a year with his sister Mary to keep house for him. He was married Feb. 15, 1843 to Almira Maria Allen, whose family were then living in Hounsfield. She was a daughter of Reuben Allen, who was a son of Major Benjamin Allen, of Cheshire, Mass., a Revolutionary soldier, and a son of Barnabas Allen, who was born in Seekonk, R. I., about 1740, he being a son of Barnabas who came from Scotland to Gloucester, Mass., in the early part of the eighteenth century. Almira was born in Hammond, N. Y., Feb. 26, 1821. In 1844, Mr. Hinds sold this farm, and after making a trip to Illinois to look for better opportunities, among which was a chance to buy, at a very low price, land on the west side of the river, now covered by the city of Chicago, he came back and bought a farm in the town of Pamela, about four miles from Watertown. It was here, by constant application to business, that Mr. Hinds succeeded, in later years, in adding three other farms to his ownership.

He lived among his farms until his death, and was always actively interested in the details of the business, though in later years they were mostly occupied by tenants.

His son Oscar E., remaining unmarried until after his death, was his constant assistant and able manager of affairs.

Mr. Hinds died in Pamela, N. Y., May 18, 1894, and his wife March 10, 1890. Both are buried in Brookside cemetery, just south of the city of Watertown.

Her ancestors were pioneer settlers of the town, those on the maternal side coming from Newton, of which the Woodwards and Murdocks were well-known families, established there soon after the settlement of Boston. Her father moved to Worcester with his family about 1830, where he passed most of his active life. He will be remembered by old citizens as a popular landlord and a business man of enterprise and probity. The father of her husband was one of the pioneer settlers of the town, coming from Watertown Farms (now Weston), near Boston. The first of his family to settle America, was Walter Allen, who was living in Newbury in 1640. The land originally settled upon by Jonathan Allen in Barre is still owned and cultivated by his descendants. Mrs. Allen was the victim of a physical infirmity, entailing constant suffering from infancy, to the end of a life prolonged to a great age by constant self-denial and carefulness. This condition prevented her from much attendance of school in youth, but she eagerly improved every opportunity of acquiring knowledge and culture, and was ever a devoted reader of good books, preferring poetry, biography, travels and certain religious classics. The privileges of instruction, of which she was deprived, she never underestimated, and that her children might enjoy superior advantages of this kind, was the chief aim of her life, and one for which no labors or sacrifices were accounted too great.

Her activities were necessarily limited, for the most part, to home and church affairs; but she was fond of company, generous in hospitality, and in her friendships cordial and constant, having a gift to win affection and confidence. She bore with willingness and charity the woes of many less fortunate than herself as long as she had strength to counsel and console. To be a faithful daughter, wife and mother, and a humble disciple of her Lord in service of the weak, the afflicted and the erring, were the instinctive motives of her life, and constituted the sphere of duty that contented her.

Early in life, she united with the Congregational church in Hubbardston, and when moving to Worcester, attached herself to the Central church. In Boston, her relation was with the Phillips church. Since the death of her husband, owing to her ill-health and not being able to maintain a separate home, she lived with her sons away from Worcester. With little disposition to make new friendships, she cherished with increasing affection the old ones, the memory of those departed and the affection of the living. Her end was a holy falling asleep.

Cutler, of Girard. His first undertaking on his own account, was teaching in a district school. The following year, he was engaged as an assistant in the Girard Academy, pursuing his studies and teaching at the same time. In the year 1852, in November of that year, he entered the employ of the Northwestern Fire Insurance Company, in the city of Erie, Penn., as cashier, and later transferred to the office of this company, located in Philadelphia. In 1855, he was elected secretary of the Merchants Fire Insurance Company, of that city. In the latter part of the year 1856, he resigned his position, to engage in the lumber and general merchandise business in Phillipsburg, Center Co., Penn., where he continued business until the spring of 1859, when he disposed of his interests there and moved to Minnesota, to take charge of the Minnesota Valley Stage Company, as general manager, with headquarters in St. Paul and Shakopee. During that year, he purchased a half-interest in this stage company, and continued in its management until the expiration of its mail contracts in July, 1862. After disposing of the assets of this company, and closing its affairs, he located in Milwaukee, purchasing an interest in the Pennsylvania Oil Company, then doing business in that city, and where he resided until the fall of 1865. He then moved to Chicago, the company transferring its plant there, for business reasons, where he continued to live until October, 1868, when he moved to Hinsdale, Ill., his present residence (1899).

In October, 1871, the great Chicago fire entirely destroyed the oil works. The destruction was so complete, that it caused an entire change in his business, and in the spring of 1872, he again took up the lumber trade, with its adjuncts, which he has since continued.

He says, "I have never been a politician, although I have always taken an active interest in public affairs pertaining to the village of Hinsdale and its local institutions." In 1872, the village of Hinsdale was incorporated into a town, and Mr. Hinds was chosen as a member of its first board of trustees. Since then he has served at different times, having been its president for nine years, and a member of its trustees for eight years. Since 1870, he has been almost continually connected with school interests, first as director, and later as a member of the township's board of school trustees, serving nine years as president of that board. In February, 1889, he was one of the four persons who organized the Hinsdale Building and Loan Association, being its first president, and reelected each year since, and holding the office to-day. He has also held the presidency of the Hinsdale Club and the Hinsdale Building Company. For several years, he was regent of the Hinsdale Council, No. 785, Royal Arcanum, of which he is still a member. He is at present connected with the firm of E. P. Hinds & Son, dealers in railroad ties, paving posts, bark, shingles and lumber, his place of business being located in Chicago. He got as far as New York, where he became stranded. He then went to Newark, and later in life, opened a factory for the manufacture of pianos. Beginning on a small scale the business gradually grew and became quite flourishing. He taught school and carried on the business of architect and builder until thirty years of age; then took up the study of dentistry, which he practised for forty-five years, gaining the highest prize for improvement in artificial teeth, at one of the Charitable Mechanics fairs, held in Boston. He enlisted April 19, 1861, in Groton, Mass., and helped raise a company, of which he was chosen first lieutenant. She was born in Princeton, Green Lake Co., Wis., April 22, 1855.

Charles was left, at the death of his mother, a baby, eighteen months old, to the care of a loving father, who tenderly watched over him for eight short years, when he too was called away, and the boy was left an orphan. His Grandfather Judkins then took him to his home, where he remained until he reached the age of twenty-one. In 1861, the family moved to Wisconsin, with teams, making a journey of six long, hard weeks. During the five years in which they lived in Wisconsin, Charles received his common school education, under many difficulties, as the grandfather was poor and needed the help of the whole family in making a start in the new country.

In the year 1867, the family moved into the new unsettled part of Minnesota, where they took up a government claim, and then followed a hard struggle for a living, in which Charles gave all the assistance possible. In 1869, he obtained a government position, being one of the assistants in the survey of Yellowstone Park, which lasted eight months. This was a very dangerous expedition, but the party was accompanied by a regiment of United States soldiers, who were commanded by Generals Whistler and Stanley. They were once attacked by Indians, and five of the party killed.

It was after this that Charles took up engineering and surveying, as an occupation, and was in the employ of the government for several years. He was one of the surveyors who laid out the Sisseton Sioux Indian reservation in Dakota, under supervision of General Barrett, in 1870. He was next in the employ of the St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., in the capacity of civil engineer.

In May, 1874, he joined the expedition to establish the international boundary line on the 49th parallel. This party was protected on its long and perilous journey by General Custer and his famous Seventh Regiment of cavalry. The train was composed of over seven hundred wagons, drawn by mules.

After this, he was for two terms appointed county surveyor of Pope County, Minn., and also acted as surveyor and locator in Oklahoma in 1888. He at present resides in Villard, Pope Co., Minn., and has been instrumental in making his branch of the family complete for this work.

in the residential part of the city, and continued doing business for many years, meeting with much success.

While in his down-town store, he started the preparation which is widely known throughout the world, and which has made his name famous, "Honey and Almond Cream." Commencing upon a small scale, it went through the experimental stages for ten years, before being put upon the market. It then received a ready sale and has grown to its present immense proportions. The sale annually reaches every state in the Union, as well as South American countries, Australia, Sandwich Islands, England, France, Russia, India, and many other countries too numerous to mention. Agencies have been established in Australia, the Sandwich Islands and London, and in Montreal, P. The goods are put up for both the English and the Spanish trade, nearly all of the work pertaining to the business being done in his laboratory in Portland.

H., March 24, 1850, and died in Townsend, Mass., April 5, 1887; married (second) March 4, 1890, Mrs. Mary A. (Templeman) Sawyer. Mr. Hinds says:—"When nineteen years of age I left home with ten dollars in my inside pocket, fully resolved in my mind that I had done farming. I paid about nine dollars out of the ten for car fare to Massachusetts, and struck out to make my fortune. After three years spent in shoe shops, and one in the army, I had saved up twenty-two hundred dollars. Then I went in company with a party in a manufacturing business, remaining in that line three years, when I found myself, through fire and others' dishonesty, without a dollar of my capital and a wife and little girl to care for. Failing to find work at my trade, I took up canvassing, which I followed two years, keeping wife and baby with me and hiring furnished rooms and boarding ourselves, that we might save all that was possible. After two years I had saved seventeen hundred dollars. I now sighed for a farm, and with my oldest brother, bought one, which had one hundred peach and three hundred apple trees together with grape vines and a few cherry trees. The first and second seasons, we sold five hundred dollars' worth of peaches from one hundred trees each year. We commenced setting out more trees, also strawberries, raspberries and blackberries. When our trees reached the age of five years, we commenced thinning them out feeling sure that we were to harvest three thousand dollars' worth of peaches. At picking time it rained and more than one half of the peaches ripened prematurely and rotted, until all we realized was seven hundred dollars from one thousand trees, and in two years the trees were so nearly all dead that we pulled them up.

"Meantime, we had increased the red raspberries until we had six acres of them, but by the time we were ready to pick them the inch worms attacked two acres of the best we ever had, so that we were obliged to pull them up and burn them. Several times we lost our grapes, just before ripening, by the frost.

"About this time I bought my brother's share in the farm, he going South for his wife's health. Three years later my wife's health failed and after three years of sickness, she left me with five children, between two and fifteen years. Then came the hardest period of my life. We struggled along one way and another for three years, when I married again. I continued the fruit growing business, and am now glad to say that it is paying."

He enlisted Sept. 3, 1864, in the 1st N. H. Heavy Artillery, Company Q, living during a part of the war in the fortifications at Arlington and Maryland Heights. He was discharged in June, 1865, returning to his farm in New Hampshire. He resides in Townsend, Mass. (1899).

ANDREW HINDS.

25, 1822, and died in Lena, Ill., Jan. 13, 1899; married in Oneco, Ill., April 8, 1849, Sarah Gibler, who was born on a farm in Clinton Co., Ohio, Dec. 10, 1825, and died in Lena, April 12, 1892. Judge Hinds was one of Stephenson County's foremost citizens, and probably did more for that county than any other man. He was a constant example of integrity, industry and faithfulness. His first public work in the county was teaching, and during his spare moments he studied law. He married soon after and purchased a farm, which he operated. Success followed his efforts and he soon purchased other farms. His popularity now brought him before the public as a candidate for office. He was repeatedly elected to township and county office and served one term in the legislature. In every position in life he proved himself a man of integrity and sound judgment.

Judge Hinds was a New Englander, and came from good Vermont stock. His ancestors were pioneers of the eastern country as he was of the West, and they fought for the right in the American army during the war of 1812. Andrew attended a log school, where the teachings were simple, but he studied hard and was soon able to attend the academy in Johnson, where he began teaching when at the age of eighteen. He continued teaching for five years, studying law at the same time. He recognized law as his calling and made rapid progress. He was admitted to the bar and began practising in June, 1847, continuing until Sept., 1848. His health failed him and his parents feared he would soon become a victim of consumption. Andrew had read much of the West, its climate, possibilities, etc., and he decided to go there and endeavor to win health and fortune in the new country. About this time, he received a letter from an old friend and schoolmate, advising him to come West and settle at Mineral Point, Wis., which was a good field for the practise of his profession. He made the trip mostly by water, setting out by way of Lake Champlain and its canals to Erie, Pa., then to Buffalo, N. Y., by canal, and to Chicago through the Great Lakes. Travel was slow and expensive, and by the time Chicago was reached, the young man's finances were running low and he still had one hundred and fifty miles to go. While in Chicago he overheard a man talking about Monroe and Mineral Point, Wis., and he immediately inquired if he lived there. The gentleman, who was Mr. Ludlow (now deceased) and who became one of the wealthiest and best known citizens of Southern Wisconsin, and ever remained a firm friend to Judge Hinds, replied that he lived in Monroe and asked the young man if he wanted to go there, and would like to go with him. The judge eagerly accepted the offer. Together they went to Rockford, where Mr. Ludlow had left his team, and from there they drove across to Monroe. From here Mr. Hinds went to Mineral Point and met his friend.

He remained until January, when he met a Stephenson County farmer, who had brought a load of dressed pork to market. The farmer was from Oneco Township, where a new schoolhouse had been completed, and was looking for a teacher. The farmer learned of Mr. Hinds' years of school work and immediately hunted him up, offering him the job at $20 per month and board around.

Mr. Hinds considered this his opportunity and took the job. His school duties began immediately, and he taught with signal success. The judge never doubted but that destiny sent him to his duties in this county, for it was while boarding around that he met the girl who became his helpmeet through life. While boarding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Gibler, he met their daughter, Sarah, and ever after life seemed brighter and nature more beautiful. The couple were united in marriage, and they went to farming on a tract of land which the groom had purchased. The judge was a hard worker, and spent his evenings in studying and keeping up his law practise. He enjoyed work of all kinds, and his farm was a pleasure. In following the plow, he studied nature, and it seemed to him as if he had been taken to fairyland when he left rocky Vermont and arrived in beautiful Stephenson County. He was successful at his labors, both as farmer and attorney, and as his wealth increased he purchased more land, until he had several farms, cultivated and occupied by tenants. He was recognized as a man of more than ordinary ability, and held various township offices, and was supervisor for many years. He was elected county treasurer in 1855, and soon after moved to Freeport. He was elected county judge in 1869. He represented Oneco on the county board for twenty years. He was elected to the state legislature and introduced the Hinds' Prohibitory Bill, the first temperance measure that was ever brought before the legislature. Although the bill did not pass, it caused favorable comment, and finally led to the passage of a similar bill.

The judge served several terms as chairman of the county board, and chairman of Stephenson County Court House and Jail Building Committee. It was at this time that the court house and jail were built, and Mr. Hinds was largely instrumental in bringing the matter to a successful conclusion. All the legal papers and writings regarding the construction of these buildings are in the judge's handwriting. He was an eloquent and forcible speaker, and was in general demand at all public gatherings until a few years ago, when he retired from the platform. He was one of the first advocates of the free school system, and his voice was ever raised in defense of the system. It was but a few years until the people understood the matter and the system was adopted. The judge was a man of convictions and he never feared to express them.

The family life of Judge Hinds was a happy and contented one. He had been successful in choosing his occupations in life, and was very fortunate in selecting a wife. They were married young and began married life on a farm. Love and harmony made their work light, and each year added to their fortune and family. Twelve children came to bless their home, eleven of whom survived their parents, and lived to call them blessed. The family is a remarkable one, and all are enterprising, progressive citizens, and a credit to that part of the country in which they live. The wife and mother gave up the cares of life in 1892 and went to her reward. Her death was a terrible blow to the judge and the children, and the husband could hardly be reconciled to continuing life alone, after twoscore years of happy wedded life. After the death of his wife, he made his home with his children.

His funeral services were held in the Baptist church in Lena, and were attended by a throng, who came to do honor to the memory of their departed friend. The Stephenson County Bar Association held services in the home, before going to the church.

The life of the late Judge Hinds was an ideal one, a splendid example for a young man of to-day to follow. When he left his eastern home, it took nerve to go to the wilderness of the far West, but he possessed the courage to go. Upon his arrival, he had nothing to help him but his Christian teachings and honorable young manhood. But he was not afraid of work—he gloried in it, and went at it with a determination to overcome every obstacle. His labors bore fruit, and he soon became possessed of a farm. A true woman then took her place by his side, and prosperity and a large family followed. He went into politics, and bettered his party by his presence. He would enter no combination that would not stand public approval, and all through his life, his course has been one of honor. He was a true man, honorable in his public and private life, and loyal to every trust.

Franklin Allen<sup>8</sup> Hinds, son of Earl Bent<sup>7</sup> and Almira Maria (Allen) Hinds (Thomas<sup>6</sup>, Corlis<sup>5</sup>, Corlis<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>1</sup>), was born Nov. 17, 1843, in the town of Watertown, N. Y. He commenced the study of civil engineering in Watertown, pursuing the preliminary studies at the Jefferson County Institute, a well organized academic school of those days. When twenty-one he went to Portland, Ore., where he continued his studies, and had a practical experience for two years under the tutorship of Mr. Charles W. Burrage, C. E., then county and city surveyor of that place. Returning to his home he entered the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College and took a special selected course in engineering and allied subjects. In 1867, he obtained employment with Chickering & Co., landscape engineers, etc., at 18 Wall St., New York, and on Christmas day of that year was married to Miss Mary Rebecca Thomson of Watertown, who was born in West Turn, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1846, and who with her parents moved to Watertown from Houseville, Lewis County, N. Y. Her parents were William and Mary Taylor (Peabody) Thomson, the mother descending in a parallel line, with the philanthropist, George Peabody, from a common ancestor, William Peabody, of Plymouth. This William Peabody's wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John and Priscilla (Mullins) Alden of the Mayflower, whose story Longfellow has told in poetry. Longfellow's mother was a descendant of Priscilla, whom he quotes as saying "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" when John Alden was sent to ask her hand for his captain, Miles Standish. She declined the captain's offer, and John and Priscilla were afterward married. Mary Peabody Thomson, the mother of Mrs. Hinds, is of the sixth generation from William Peabody of Plymouth.

During the year 1858, Mr. Hinds was engaged in the early surveys of the Black River and St. Lawrence Railroad (now the Carthage & Adirondack in Northern New York), under Mr. Octave Blanc, as chief engineer. After completing the preliminary surveys of this road, Mr. Hinds was made chief engineer of the Carthage, Watertown & Sacketts Harbor Railroad, which position he held to the completion of that road. Later he laid out and mapped the Thousand Island Park, Westminster Park, Round Island Park, Central Park, and numerous others of the great summer resorts of the St. Lawrence River. He had charge, as engineer of construction, of the Kingston and Pembroke Railroad in Canada, and after that, was placed in charge of the surveys of the New York & Boston Inland Railway, serving this latter corporation for two years. He has been city engineer of Watertown for a number of terms, and made the survey for the city boundary when it was first incorporated and promoted from a village, in 1868. About 1885, he was engaged in building and operating water-works for supplying cities and towns, and in company with J. F. Moffett, of Watertown, and others, under the firm name of Hinds, Moffett & Co., built and established water works in a large number of cities and villages in various parts of the United States. In 1886, Mr. Hinds sold his entire interest in this business to his partners, and his connection with this firm then ceased. In 1887 and 1888, he was engaged in the organization and construction of the Ontario paper mills, near Brownville, and was a director in the company until it was merged in the great International Paper Company. He is a member of the board of water commissioners of the city of Watertown, having served on this board continually since 1880, occupying the position of vice-president of the board. He has also been one of the vestrymen of Trinity church, Watertown, N. Y., since 1887.

In 1889, he formed a co-partnership with Mr. E. A. Bond, afterwards state engineer of New York State, for the construction of water-works and general engineering, and under their direction as engineers, water-works were built in numerous villages and small towns of Northern New York state. The Gouverneur & Edwards Railroad was organized and surveyed, also several water-works were built under franchise in Canada. This co-partnership was dissolved in 1896, and Mr. Hinds has since been engaged in general hydraulic and mechanical engineering in and about Watertown, principally among the various mills and water powers of the Black River Valley.

They had one son, Earl William Hinds, who died June 3, 1872. The family burying-ground is in Brookside cemetery, about two miles south of the city of Watertown, where many old families are represented, and the names of early settlers of the county are found upon its tablets.

In business, Mr. Hinds has always taken a deep interest in the young men of his profession, and he has been generally successful in encouraging habits of usefulness among his employees, always urging excellence in their work as a first principle, and himself furnishing an example of temperate personal habits. There are a large number of successful business men, engineers, contractors, etc., now about the country, who commenced their career in his office, and who look back with pleasure to their early experience, and are now his warmest personal friends. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, an association organized in 1852, among the practical, professional civil engineers, and which has on its roll of membership some of the most distinguished men of the age.

He has resided for more than twenty-five years on a suburban farm located at No. 161 State street in the city of Watertown, about one and a half miles from his office in the center of the city, where with a competent man to attend to the work, he enjoys the quiet of country life and the opportunities for study and investigation thereby afforded. He has been of great help in supplying the material of his branch of the family for this work.

She was born in Portland, July 13, 1876. He received his early schooling in the public schools of Portland, later going to Worcester Academy, Worcester, Mass., where he remained some over a year, returning to Portland in 1892. Here he took up a complete course of shorthand and typewriting, and in September, 1894, entered the senior class at the Peekskill Military Academy, graduating in June, 1895, receiving gold and silver medals for prize oratory. On returning to Portland, he entered the laboratory of his father, as bookkeeper, remaining there ever since. While attending the academy in Peekskill, his attention was drawn toward genealogical work, and the foundation of this book was started there. These foundation sheets were laid aside until during the year 1897, when they were again picked up and extensive plans were made for gathering data for "The Hinds Family." This work went on until the present time, and the compiler has endeavored to make a book which will not only be interesting to the present generation, but which will be handed down to the many generations to come. May all find as much interest contained therein, as the author has found in compiling the same. He lives in Portland (1899).

Unattached Families

The following legend, regarding this branch of the Hinds family, has been told to the compiler of this book, and which has doubtless considerable truth in it, as it has been impossible to trace further back. One other point which seems to make it all the more true, is the fact that nearly every member of this family, with whom correspondence has been carried on, relates nearly the same story. As the legend goes: "There was an Englishman, named Rogers, who was said to have been a great hunter. At one time, in company with one of the kings of England, he caught an animal called a 'hind', and beat it to death with a club, by which act he saved the life of the king. For this exploit, the English government knighted him, and changed his name from 'Rogers' to 'Hinds,' and entailed to him and his heirs forever, an island called 'Placentia Island.' A certain man, whose name is unknown, but which is supposed to have been Mudgett, then of Holderness, N. H., made a trip to England and found that the story was true, had the papers completed, but was shipwrecked on his way home." This story has been vouched for by many prominent members of this branch of the family.

2299. This Rogers had a son, whom it is believed he named Ambrose Hinds, and who married Sarah Mudgett, July 15, 1773. Ambrose Hinds had thirteen children, of whom eight are as follows:

Portland, in the first half of the nineteenth century. Going to Portland from New Hampshire at an early age, he soon impressed those with whom he came in contact as a man of remarkable energy and integrity of character, with business qualities of a high order. He organized, developed and owned what was probably the first water work system for public use in that city, conducting water from the hill down to the water front, by means of the aqueduct system. He was also one of the original and largest owners in the first steamboat sailing from Portland, the old steamer Portland, this interest merging into his subsequent large ownership in the Portland Steam Packet Co., and furthermore, was a well-known and successful merchant of the city. He was a life-long Democrat, voting at every election to the year of his death, and notwithstanding his extreme age, steadily refusing to ride to the polling-place. 2341. William Henry Weed Hinds, son of Barzillai and Selura (Aldrich) Hinds (Orlando, Ambrose), born in Chichester, N. H., Aug. 1, 1833, and died in Milford, N. H., July 29, 1897; married (first) in Boston, Mass., Aug. 23, 1861, Harriet M. Twiss, who died in Milford, Feb. 7, 1871; married (second) in Amherst, Mass., Aug. 17, 1880, A. Margaret Twiss, who died in Milford, Jan. 12, 1890. He was a native of Chichester, N. H., his family moving to Boston when he was quite young. In that city he attended the public schools, and was a graduate of the English High School, afterwards studying medicine and attending medical lectures in Boston, receiving his certificate signed by the highest medical authority of the state, making the profession of medicine and surgery his life work.

Before the war, he accepted a position at Tewksbury almshouse, Mass., which he held until 1861. He was commissioned assistant surgeon in the 17th Mass. Regiment, which left that state for the seat of war on the 23d day of Aug., 1861. At a later period, he was commissioned as full surgeon in the 12th Regt., where he served with distinction until the expiration of its term of service.

The United States Medical and Surgical History of the War of the Rebellion, part 3, vol. 2, page 450, has the following reference among special cases of surgical skill, the operation being performed by Dr. Hinds on Private Lewis, Co. G., 12th Mass. Regt., May 30th, 1864: "Three inches of middle fibula (the small bone of the leg) removed, and so skilful was the operation that the regeneration of the bone took place."

In January, 1865, he went to Milford, where he was eminently successful as a skilled surgeon and physician, his practise having extended very considerably to the adjoining towns. By his cheering word, his patient manner, his calm and considerate demeanor, he endeared himself as a physician in scores of families, and his name was a household word. How many of the young people of to-day remember him from their earliest youth, and he never failed to recognize them with a kindly word. He was, to many of the elderly people of the community, too, their only medical adviser. Outside of his professional duties, he at all times took the deepest interest in social, town, state and national affairs. In all of these he was clear-minded, advised himself of facts, a keen observer of the character of men, and when once his opinion was formed, there it remained until circumstances of a most positive nature should interpose to change his mind. Never made an assertion without a reason, and was a man of positive opinions, and one whose judgment upon matters political and otherwise was sought after by his fellow men. In politics, he was an unfaltering Republican, one whose mind was well stored with the principles of the party, and one who could refer with great accuracy to the life and career of public men, and readily quote speech or public sayings of distinguished men of his time. He was the happy possessor of the faculty of recalling to mind matters of interest and import. These things of intellectual excellence were his; he had earned them; he was generous in the bestowal of them when occasion required. He took an active interest in the cause of education, and was a good friend to the school system. On the board of health he was an efficient member, and seconded every effort to carry forward any interest in that direction for the welfare of the town.

In society circles he was always a prominent and interested member, the Masonic fraternity probably eliciting his greatest pride and attention, having a membership in Benevolent Lodge, King Solomon R. A. Chapter, Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter, Knights Templar, and was a 32d degree mason. He was a member of O. W. Lull Post, G. A. R., and the Loyal Legion; Custos Morum Lodge I. O. O. F., and Rebekah Degree Lodge; Souhegan Commandery of the Golden Cross, and the Knights of Honor. He had held positions on the board of education, board of health, member of the trustees of the free library, and was frequently on committees on town affairs; was elected trustee of the Milford Savings Bank, Aug. 18, 1884; was elected president, Aug. 26, 1893. He had represented the town in legislature, and was honored by the citizens of the town as a member of the state senate, and for a time a member of the State Republican committee.
